Outlook good for flood relief program here

by JOE FRANZ

Major flood relief for Buffalo Grove and Wheeling residents came one step closer Friday with the announcement of a forthcoming agreement for construction of a 100-acre retention lake on Buffalo Creek.

Buffalo Grove Village Mgr. Daniel Larson said Friday the Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD) announced it was the opinion of attorneys that it could finance the $2.8 million project even though it was outside the district's jurisdiction.

Larson said although the MSD will finance the entire project, the Lake County Forest Preserve District will have to obtain the land through condemnation. This will take about six months. Construction will probably begin late this year or early next year and take four months to complete, he said.

THE 144-ACRE parcel is located at the southwest corner of Arlington Heights and Checker roads. Most of the site is farm land, although there are two homes involved.

When completed the retention lake will have a capacity of 2 million gallons of water. It will hold run-off into Buffalo Creek from areas northwest of Buffalo Grove.

"This is a major regional flood control project," Larson said. "It will control all the water that flows into the village from the west."

Larson explained that water from upstream (northwest) flows in a southeasterly direction into Buffalo Grove and Wheeling. At the time of a heavy rainstorm the excessive amount of water coming downstream overloads the sewers and causes flooding.

The retention pond, to be located to the northwest of Buffalo Grove, will catch and retain the water so it cannot run downstream. This will give the sewer systems in the villages less water to handle, Larson said.

AFTER THE STORM is over, and the sewer systems are equipped to handle additional water, the retention lake will release the water under controlled conditions. This will allow it to flow through Wheeling and Buffalo Grove without creating flooding, Larson explained.

Under extreme conditions when the retention lake is filled to its capacity, it will take a maximum of four days for the excess water to run out and the lake to return to its normal size of 10 acres.

Although most of the retention lake will be located in Lake County, it will be of little benefit to Lake County residents because they are located upstream from the project. Downstream Cook County residents will benefit most. Some sections of Prospect Heights will also benefit from the lake.

BUFFALO GROVE and Wheeling officials have been working for this project since 1967.

The Hollywood Ridge area of Wheeling, north of Dundee Road and west of Ill. Rte. 83 will particularly benefit from it. Homes in the area border on the south side of Buffalo Creek, and often experience flooding when the creek overflows its banks in heavy rains, according to Wheeling officials.

In regard to the project, trustee William Hein, chairman of the sewer and water committee of the Wheeling Village Board said, "It will be helping keep the creek at a lower level. It will probably be most felt in that area (Hollywood Ridge)."

He also said that less water would go into the Wheeling drainage ditch as a result of the lake.

In Buffalo Grove all the areas along Buffalo Creek will benefit from the retention lake.

Buffalo Grove will assume responsibility for maintenance of the spillway and control facilities at the lake, following its completion.

The area around the lake will be developed into a public park and will be suitable for sports activities. When the lake is not being used for flood control, it will be open to the public for boating and fishing, said Larson.

DAMAGE TO APARTMENTS in the River-Willow Garden Apartments was estimated at $90,000 after a fire broke out in the attic of the building early Saturday. According to Wheeling Fire Chief Bernie Koeppen, most of the damage was caused by smoke and water, with very little resulting from the blaze itself. Firemen from six departments fought the blaze for three hours in high winds and snow.

Apartment couple averted tragedy

Five families left homeless by a fire early Saturday morning at 916 Old Willow Rd. in unincorporated Wheeling Township owe a great deal to their neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. William Senecal. Wheeling Fire Chief Bernie Koeppen credited the Senecals with getting residents of the burning apartment building out alive.

The fire was discovered around 3 a.m. by Mrs. Senecal who said she was awakened by what sounded like someone throwing rocks at her bedroom window. She said when she looked out the window she could see sparks from the fire in the adjoining building of the River-Willow Garden Apartments.

"I WOKE UP my husband and told him to call the fire department, and then I got dressed and ran over to the building to wake up the people," she said. "I met a boy who helped my husband and I wake up the residents."

The boy, about 19, was not identified. Senecal said to his knowledge no one knew of the fire since it was in the attic of the building. He said there was very little smoke in the building while he was waking residents.

When told that Koeppen credited them with saving the lives of residents in the building, the Senecals said, "We did what we had to do."

The fire, which caused an estimated $90,000 damage, lasted about three hours.

THE EARLY morning blaze was contained in the upper area of the building.

"We lost the roof, but the apartment on the second floor only had smoke and water damage, while the first floor only had water damage," Koeppen said. "There was very little actual fire damage to the apartments."

Koeppen, who directed the fire fighting with chiefs from Northbrook and Glenview, said the ceiling of the building prevented the fire from spreading. He said that while the cause of the fire is undetermined, officials believe it started in the attic above the second floor laundry room because that was where the heaviest damage occurred.

Residents from surrounding apartments, the Salvation Army and the Red Cross aided the homeless residents and provided food and coffee for the more than 70 fire fighters at the scene.

Owners of the apartment complex were reportedly finding other apartments for the homeless victims.

40-acre annex suit continued again

A hearing on a lawsuit filed two years ago by a Prospect Heights group charging Wheeling illegally annexed 40 acres of undeveloped land has been continued again.

The hearing, scheduled for today, has been continued until 10 a.m. March 29 because Circuit Court Judge Robert Downing is out of town. Downing is the third judge to hear the suit, which has been continued more than 10 times since filed in March, 1971.

The suit charges that Wheeling illegally annexed 40 acres of land near Wheeling Road, north of Camp McDonald

Road, because the land is not contiguous to the village. In November, 1971, a judge ruled that the land was not contiguous.

BUT THE CHARGE is being heard again because Downing is new to the case. Assistant State's Atty. Paul Bebel, who is now handling the case for the group known as the Wheeling Road Zoning Committee, said he expects Judge Downing to also rule that the annexation was illegal.

Once the contiguity question is settled, the judge will have to rule on the charge by Wheeling that the Prospect Heights group waited too long after the annexation to file the suit. The suit was filed 44 days after the annexation of the land, owned by Arnold Liebling. The statutory limit for filing a suit is one year.

Liebling has been allowed to intervene in the suit on the side of Wheeling. He wants to build a multi-family development on the land, which was rezoned for the development by Wheeling officials when it was annexed in February, 1971. The site is just east of Wheeling Road and south of St. Alphonsus Catholic School.

This Morning In Brief

The nation

Critics of President Nixon's Phase III economic policies plan to offer tough anti-inflation amendments when the wage-price control bill comes before the Senate today. The Economic Stabilization Act, which gave the President authority to issue Phase I and Phase II wage and price controls, expires April 30. The administration wants the authorization extended for another year although Phase III depends largely on voluntary guidelines.

Militant Indians occupying Wounded Knee, S.D. booted a new government proposal asking them to lay down their arms and submit peacefully to arrest. There has been no formal response by American Indian Movement leaders to the proposal. Many have vowed to die rather than surrender.

A stick of dynamite exploded near a Denver, Colo. police substation and a Molotov cocktail hit a community relations storefront a day after battles between police and snipers left one man dead and 19 injured. Mexican-American leaders in Denver say police used excessive action in breaking into apartments and making wholesale arrests.

Twenty-five school children had to be evacuated from a northern Indiana farmhouse where they had been stranded since Saturday when their school bus became bogged down in deep snow while returning from a field trip. Three National Guard helicopters were sent in and other copters were used to reach motorists stranded in drifts across the northeastern section of the state.

Thousands of residents in Tennessee,

Alabama and Mississippi were left homeless by torrential rains that spawned the worst flooding in the region in nearly half a century. Damage estimates ranged in the millions of dollars. Six persons were killed in weather-related accidents, four in Tennessee and two in Alabama.

The world

Communist rebels unleashed rocket attacks on the suburbs of Phnom Penh, capital of Cambodia, shortly before celebrations of the third anniversary of Prince Norodom Sihanouk's overthrow were to begin. The prince's mother and eight other members of the royal family were placed under arrest after Saturday's bombing attack on the presidential palace by his son-in-law. Despite the attacks thousands of Cambodians sang and danced in the streets.

Ten bombings, 25 shootings and a landmine explosion killed at least two persons in 24 hours in Belfast, giving blood-soaked Ireland its worst weekend in months. The explosion of a bomb-laden car outside a border pub killed a man in the car and slightly injured 25 persons attending a St. Patrick's Day celebration.

The dollar will be on its own today when European and Japanese money markets reopen and the "dirty float" worked out by 14 finance ministers takes effect, putting the value of the American currency at the mercy of supply and demand. Most ministers hope the market value of the dollar will be about the same as when it was at a fixed rate.

Would increase local dues

Teachers to vote on joining union

by WANDALYN RICE

The teachers in High School Dist. 214 will vote today on whether they want their local education association to affiliate with the Illinois Education Association and the National Education Association.

If the vote to affiliate is affirmative, one result will be an increase in dues for those teachers belonging to the local. In addition, however, the vote would indicate a shift in the balance of power that has prevailed in the local group since 1971.

Local leaders do not expect the outcome of the vote to have immediate effect on negotiations now under way between the local association and the Dist. 214 School Board on the 1973-74 contract. However, changes in over-all philosophy of the local may result in shifts during the bargaining.

Prior to the vote, Vince Carloti, president of the local, said he could not predict the outcome, but added that he will resign his position if the teachers decide to affiliate with IEA-NEA.

IF THE LOCAL group affiliates, Carloti said, all members of the local will be required to belong to the state and national groups. "When it comes to the point that the individual does not have the right to choose the level of participation in the groups I draw the line," Carloti said. "I'm more than willing to work to a frazzle for the local association, but I don't want to join IEA-NEA."

The Dist. 214 association, was affiliated with IEA-NEA until the fall of 1971 when, under the leadership of former Pres. Richard Chierico, the group withdrew from these groups.

The withdrawal came shortly after the IEA-NEA agreed to require all members of affiliated locals to belong to the state and national groups. Until then, Carloti said, "We were affiliated, but the affiliation was so loose we were practically independent."

Chierico agrees the requirement for full membership in all groups was a major reason for many teachers agreeing to drop affiliation in 1971. However, he traces his own dissatisfaction to disputes with IEA staff members and "the flow of power away from the local associations and the way the professional staff was pushing strikes."

IN RECENT years, Chierico says, IEA has become increasingly militant and "if militant action is necessary in some parts of the state, I make no judgement, but this is not the issue in Dist. 214."

In a flyer distributed to teachers before the vote, Chierico also asserted that the IEA is in financial trouble, with debts of more than $2 million. In addition, he said an increase in IEA dues to $65 a year was pushed through the group's state convention undemocratically.

Negotiations on the 1972-73 contract between the Dist. 214 association and board dragged on for 10 months, with an agreement reached in early November. However, Chierico and Carloti say affiliation with IEA probably would not have shortened the talks and Chierico says it might have made things worse.

Chierico says the local group could have put public pressure on the board without resorting to a strike if the settlement had not come when it did. "We didn't flex all the power we could have," he says. "We had strength in reserve."

ADVOCATES of the IEA-NEA within the district, however, have not agreed with Chierico's position. Today's referendum was called by a member of the 1972-73 negotiation team and the local IEA-NEA affiliate, led by teacher Barry Stoughton, has been campaigning for reunification.

Campaign literature sent out by the IEA advocates has stressed the increased strength that will come to the local with a state-wide affiliation. Stoughton said recently, "We feel that the 10 months of negotiations this year is a sign of weakness of the independent local."

Stoughton also says the IEA-NEA stands for "responsible militancy" and an end to "paternalism" in school board and administration decision-making.

The IEA provides locals with professional negotiators at their request, Stoughton adds, but "decision-making remains with the locals." He also points to IEA actions in state political races and investigations on Cook County tax assessment procedures as a sign of strength. "Teachers are taxpayers too, and we're concerned about tax money," he says.

THE WAY TODAY'S referendum has been set up, the leadership of the present Dist. 214 association now doing the negotiations with the school board will not change unless the leaders follow Carloti's lead and resign.

Carloti says he does not expect any resignations besides his own if reaffiliation comes. "I'm just one man and we know we have people who had mixed emotions about disaffiliating. I may be almost a voice in the wilderness, but I appreciate what we've accomplished and I think we've accomplished a lot for education as a good strong local. Others have benefited from gains won by Dist. 214," he says.

Results of the election are expected late Monday. Two-thirds of the teachers voting will have a favor unification with IEA-NEA for it to pass.

Local voter guides to be made available

The League of Women Voters of Arlington Heights-Mount Prospect are compiling local voter guides, which will be available next Wednesday.

Candidate information on the following offices include village board trustees, park board and library board. Candidates for office in Buffalo Grove, Arlington Heights, Elk Grove Village, Mount Prospect and Wheeling are contributing answers to the questions sent them by the league.

School board candidate information will be made available in early April.

Groups wishing bulk distribution of the booklets may contact Mrs. John DeFoe at 541-1294. Orders should be made this week.

MSD trustee urges phosphate boycott

by ANNE SLAVICEK

Local residents should boycott phosphate detergents and refuse to shop in stores that sell them, a Metropolitan Sanitary District trustee urged Friday.

Homeowners can save themselves a more than doubled tax bill from the sanitary district if they avoid phosphate brands and refuse to shop where the phosphate detergents are sold, Trustee Valentine Janicki said.

Janicki estimated that if the level of phosphate detergent use returns to what it was in 1970 before Chicago banned it within the city, the average homeowner's taxes for the MSD will increase from $29 per year to $66 per year.

He also urged apartment renters to also boycott phosphate detergents because higher taxes on apartment buildings will result in higher rental charges.

He said those figures do not include other tax increases which the MSD anticipates because of federal requirements that the district reach higher levels of purity in its sewage treatment processes.

AT AN MSD board meeting earlier this month the board pledged to help Chicago fight a Federal District Court ruling which invalidated the city's ban on phosphate detergents.

But Janicki said Friday the federal court refused to let the MSD join in the city's appeal of its ruling. He said he had requested a memo from the district's legal department on what recourse, if any, the MSD has now as far as pursuing the ban in court.

Janicki said he believes the boycott on stores will have a direct effect on the manufacture of phosphate detergents. He said he knows from personal experience in running a store that if people refuse to shop in a store because of a product the store sells, the store management will get rid of the product.

The federal government has ordered the sanitary district to remove phosphates in its sewage treatment process because the chemical phosphorus kills fish and promotes the growth of algae, Janicki noted.

"Why should a homemaker pay for having phosphates put into her detergent, then pay to take it out of the water after she uses it?" he asked.

JANICKI SAID he thinks his campaign will be successful in lessening the use of phosphate detergents.

"I think when you call attention to the fact people can keep their tax bills from going up and when you realize that people have been willing to boycott beef because of high prices, this kind of a campaign will work," he said.

Janicki has offered a free "Clean Water" volunteer pin and decal to any person who signs a pledge not to use phosphate detergents.

He said detergent purchasers should sign the following statement and mail it to Department J, 100 E. Erie St., Chicago, 60611, in order to receive the pin and decal:

"I pledge that I will not buy or use detergents that contain phosphates and I will advise the store manager where I shop that I will not buy from his

Anthony Scariano

Scariano raps Regner on meeting law change

Anthony Scariano, chairman of the Illinois Racing Commission and father of the state's open meeting law, urged newsmen and the public to oppose a proposed law that would "drastically weaken" public access to information in Illinois.

Scariano urged opposition to a change in the Illinois open meeting law proposed by State Sen. David J. Regner, R-3rd. Scariano told newsmen of the Northern Illinois Editorial Association, who met in Joliet Friday, that Regner's bill would "seriously interfere" with the public's right to know about its government.

"Dave Regner is a good legislator,"

Scariano said. "But I think he's being misled on this bill."

UNDER REGNER'S proposal, the present Illinois Open Meetings Act would be amended to allow greater latitude for public boards and commissions to meet behind closed doors. The bill would allow board members to convene with board attorneys, to discuss the sale as well as the purchase of property and would, in general, dilute the intent of the original law, according to Scariano.

"Regner is being misled by the Illinois Municipal League, I would guess," Scariano said. "That's the organization which fought the original Open Meetings

State Sen. David J. Regner

Act and, to a large degree, the Municipal League is full of political hacks. Dave should know better than to weaken the original intent of the open meetings law."

On another matter, Scariano told the Illinois newsmen that he did not foresee any immediate need to call former racing queen Marjorie Everett before the Illinois Racing Commission. Scariano said Mrs. Everett may be facing serious problems with the state of California over racing matters and disclosed the chairman of the California racing authority was in Chicago to talk about Mrs. Everett and racing in Illinois.

No-fault likely to emerge?

Auto insurance reform showdown

A showdown is coming in the move to reform auto insurance in Illinois.

No fault insurance in a modified form is likely to emerge from the scrap. This would contrast with the present tort (fault) system in which negligence or fault must be proved to collect damages resulting from an auto accident.

Speedy and more equitable payment of claims are billed as the consumer benefits of the reform measures. The prospect of lower premium rates for consumers has also been dangled as an incentive in the reform movements.

A CLOSER LOOK at the no-fault bills already introduced in the Illinois legislature and another to be introduced this week indicates that more will be gained in the reform move than consumer satisfaction.

Trial lawyers and bar associations support two measures, while the insurance industry supports a model no-fault bill to be introduced this week. In addition to consumer interests, these groups have vested interests in a flourishing lawsuit industry and freedom from federal intervention, respectively.

This accounts for certain differences in the no-fault reform bills. Another reason for some variation could be the relatively short experience the insurance industry has had in administering modified no-fault programs. The longest period of real-life results comes from Massachusetts where the no-fault measure has been in existence only two years, and the need for reform was somewhat different from the situation in Illinois.

IN ANY CASE, the consumer could reasonably expect payment for a certain amount of medical and funeral expenses resulting from auto accident, under the reform bills, without having to prove who is at fault. The amount of the payment to injured persons, the time limit for the payment, the required coverage and ability to sue for pain and suffering differ among these bills.

According to Thomas Reynolds, chairman of the Illinois Insurance Information Committee, an insurance industry-backed no-fault bill will be introduced in the Illinois legislature this week. He declined to say who the sponsor will be. A state bill would be preferable to enactment of an inflexible federal no fault law, he said.

It would allow medical expense payment up to $10,000 and funeral expenses up to $1,000. Work loss and survivors loss of $200 a week or 85 per cent of wages, whichever is greater is provided.

PAIN AND SUFFERING suits could be filed only if there is death, serious injury or disability for 60 days. This eliminates a major objection to the former Illinois no fault bill which was struck down as unconstitutional in Cook County Circuit Court (later upheld by the state Supreme Court), by setting a disability definition rather than a dollar definition, says Reynolds.

He sees the bills backed by the Illinois State and Chicago Bar association, as requiring more compulsory coverage.

The Illinois State Bar supported bill, also has the support of Leonard Ring, first vice president of the Association of Trial Lawyers of America. Ring successfully represented Michael Grace in the suit which later resulted in the Illinois no fault program being tossed out as unconstitutional.

He says the payment for pain and suffering is unlimited under the state bar bill, sponsored by Rep. Harris Fawell of Naperville. This provision is the right of

A BIRD IN THE HAND of magician Chuck Constantino disappeared in a special magic box and was never seen again. Constantino, who is a sophomore at Arlington High School, has performed in the school's talent show as well as for children's parties.

Young magician polishes tricks

Enter the magic world of Constantino

by BETTY LEE

Chuck Constantino likes to keep his pet doves in cages. But once in a while they'll snap up from a crumpled newspaper or flutter from a cloud of silk scarves.

Or Chuck will play a numbers game with you. Just a simple white card with one black dot . . . or two . . . or four. There are no other possibilities. You see him slide his hand . . . ah ha! And just when you think you've outsmarted him, he'll turn the card . . . with eight dots.

He'll do a fast twist with his wrist and a metal cage disappears. Flutter a scarf and Merlin's magic ball floats into the air.

Enter the magical world of Chuck Constantino, conjurer of mystical happenings.

He'll do tricks that many other magicians can do, and he'll do tricks few perform, like unscrambling locks, knots and chains, Houdini style. But he'll do them all with the smooth Constantino touch he has been developing for over three years.

He'll don black tails, flash a smile and begin his show with a welcome. From then on it's hard to escape from him.

THERE'S ANOTHER side to the magic world, some behind the scene events which occur that the magician's audience is not aware of.

For example, Chuck's "quicker than the eye" smoothness comes from long practice sessions. He usually can withstand the needed long hours, but not his doves. "They'll tire out," said Chuck, "and that will be the end of practicing." The doves were trained to sit on fingers and be manipulated in order to become magical doves. Now they also can play dead or stand on their heads.

And while spring rolls around, the doves coo loudly, which is not especially music to Harold Constantino, Chuck's father.

"But I give him a show," said Chuck, "and afterwards he thinks doves and all are fantastic."

And little sisters can often demand feats from big brothers. Chuck's little sister did, and he jumped into a Florida swimming pool with handcuffs and chains on. "We were on vacation," he said. "I was working on another Houdini-type trick when she challenged me. I got out of the locks and swam to the top." The ordeal has chiseled a little of his usual smoothness, so now he is pouring his efforts into birthday parties instead. Chuck, who lives at 1434 N. Highland in Arlington Heights, has been practicing for the talent show at Arlington High School, where he is a sophomore. He performs mainly for children's parties.

THE MONEY Chuck makes from doing a show goes right to the shop that sells magic tricks. "They're pretty expensive," he said.

"The dove box with instructions was $25. The magic ball was $13. Generally a good trick can start at $1.50 and go up. Even doves are expensive. Most magicians buy theirs from dove farms for $15 apiece, but I was lucky to get mine free from a friend. He gave me three doves, and since then a fourth came along. So now I've got four to train and to work with."

Pretty soon the money will have to go to school instead of to the magic shop, according to Chuck who seriously plans to enter college. And after that there will be more Constantino magic.

Bond sale finances plans approved last year

Park district board receives $600,000

The Wheeling Park District has received $600,000 to begin work on projects approved in last December's referendum.

The projects are part of a master plan for park development being considered by the board. The first half of the plan was presented to the commissioners last Thursday. They are to receive the preliminary draft of the entire plan by the end of this week and may take action on it at a special meeting set for April 5.

Early in February, the park board authorized the sale of $600,000 in bonds to the Northern Trust Co. of Chicago and its co-bidder, The Wheeling Trust and Savings Bank. The bonds were sold at a 5.1 per cent interest over the 20-year bond period.

According to Park Supt. Dave Phillips, the $600,000 will be used to proceed with those projects included in the master plan that are not eligible for state or federal matching funds.

THERE IS currently a freeze on federal funds, but with the bond money in the bank, the park district can now apply for monies from the Illinois Bureau of Outdoor Recreation (BOR). The funds would be used to aid in land acquisition and the development of present sites in the district.

Work will start as soon as possible, Phillips said, on improvements at the Heritage Park building. They are to include the addition of shower and locker rooms, the possibility of a handball court, installation of ceramic tile at Neptune's Pool and the construction of a maintenance garage.

The present garage, attached to the Heritage Park building, is no longer sufficient to house necessary park maintenance equipment.

Although the referendum authorized the park district to sell $700,000 worth of bonds, the district's current assessed valuation only allowed the sale of $600,000 in bonds. Park District Atty. Roger Bjorvik has said the park district will be able to sell the remaining $100,000 in bonds when the new assessed valuation of the district becomes official later this year.

IN OTHER BUSINESS Thursday, Phillips recommended that the board consider cooperating with the Central Lake Family YMCA to provide an eight-week "competitive swimming stroke clinic" beginning in April.

Phillips suggested the park district discuss hiring John Elliot, who organized the YMCA team presently using Neptune's Pool, to teach the daily class. The YMCA has agreed to share the cost of the program with the park district.

Group gives $1000 to fired Arlington Heights teacher

The Arlington Teachers Association (ATA) has voted to donate $1,000 to pay attorney fees for John Fender, president of the ATA, who was fired last June.

Fender, who taught language arts at Miner Junior High School, was fired by the school board for "cruelty in relations with students." He is currently appealing the case, in which a decision is expected Wednesday.

The $1,000 donation brings the total ATA contribution for Fender's legal fees to $2,200. The regional office of the Illinois Education Association (IEA) has also helped pay Fender's legal fees with $1,800. The IEA is expected to contribute more in the near future.

"We're trying to help out as much as we can. The money has been collected from our dues," said James Modoc, vice president of the ATA. "As of now our help has only been a drop in the bucket towards Fender's attorney fees, though."

The ATA welfare fund, used for unusual temporary expenses of teachers, now includes $2,000, most of which was earned during a recent tea and raffle.

IN OTHER ATA BUSINESS, the annual contract talks are scheduled to begin March 22, according to Modoc. At the present time an attorney for the teachers is reviewing the contract. "We should have a package ready by Thursday," Modoc said.

According to a ruling by the ATA representative assembly, which includes a teacher from each of the Dist. 25 schools, "the negotiating team shall not accept any package which breaks, removes or lowers the (salary) index."

Since the negotiations are not open to the public, no other contract information is available. This year, the entire two-year contract is up for negotiation.

Race track station ready by June

Construction on the new Chicago and North Western Ry. passenger station at Arlington Park Race Track is under way and should be completed by June 1.

There is a possibility, however, that use of the station will be postponed until after the close of the racing season, now set to end July 24.

An exact scheduling of trains and fares for commuters who will use the new depot still have to be arranged, according to Rollins Cookley, director of commuter service for the railroad.

But Cookley did say that the new depot will be "a full-service station" with rush hour scheduling comparable to that which now exists in downtown Arlington Heights and Palatine.

THE ARLINGTON PARK station stop is expected to become one of the biggest on the Chicago and North Western line. It is expected to draw commuters from Arlington Heights, Palatine, Rolling Meadows, Schaumburg, Buffalo Grove and Elk Grove Village.

The railroad is considering surveying riders to find out how many would switch to the new station, Cookley said. "But our big hope, of course, is to attract many new riders."

Village officials are hoping that the new depot will relieve, at least for a time, traffic and parking congestion around the downtown Arlington Heights station.

THE RACE TRACK will provide parking for about 800 cars near the depot. Access details have not been finalized, a spokesman said yesterday.

Under terms of a three-way agreement endorsed by the village, the race track and the railroad, the depot building which will cost $109,000, is being paid for by the Village of Arlington Heights from its parking fund.

The railroad paid for the track and platform work and Arlington Park is responsible for maintaining the parking area.

The building is being constructed by the F. & J. Vesceky Construction Co. of Palatine. Its exterior brick matches that used for the Arlington Park Towers Theatre.

COAKLEY SAID the fare to Chicago from the depot probably will fall about halfway between the Arlington Heights and Palatine tariffs.

ments in unincorporated Wheeling Township, left five families homeless. Owners of the complex at 916 Old Willow Rd. were reported to be finding other apartments for the homeless victims.

Seatbelt law raises legal questions

Should a motorist be required by law to use seatbelts for his own safety? According to the Illinois State Bar Association, no state now makes it mandatory for motorists to use seatbelts even though the law may require, as it does in Illinois, that automobiles be equipped with seat belts. Under Illinois law, all 1961 or later model passenger cars licensed in the state must be equipped with two sets of safety seatbelts in the front seat.

A number of states, notably Georgia, are expected to consider making seatbelt wearing mandatory this year. The Georgia effort is spurred by a finding that out of 1,600 highway fatalities during 1972, only 2 per cent of the victims were buckled into their seats. One official estimates that 80 per cent of those killed would have survived the accidents if they had been wearing seatbelts.

On the record, the outlook for mandatory legislation is not bright. At least seven states — Ohio, Michigan, New York, New Jersey, West Virginia, Rhode Island and Connecticut — recently have turned down bills that would have required motorists to buckle up whether they liked doing so or not.

IN ILLINOIS, at least one survey indicates that motorists would not like the idea. Motorists responding to a questionnaire were overwhelmingly — 3,203 to 140 — against any legal requirement that they use their seatbelts. Some objected that for short shopping trips it should not be necessary to use seat belts and that in some cases use of a belt might contribute to an injury rather than prevent one.

Other questions over compulsory seatbelt use have to do with enforcement problems, penalties and the constitutional right of a motorist to wear a lap or shoulder belt or not as he sees fit, since only his own safety is at stake.

TWO TEACHERS net organisms in a Cook County Forest Preserve water area as part of a three-day ecology workshop. The workshops are held three times a year at Camp Sagawau, an adult conservation education center.

Suburban teachers to attend live-in workshop outdoors

Northwest suburban teachers will be going to school in a forest preserve this spring during three live-in workshops on outdoor education held at Camp Sagawau near Lemont.

Teachers from schools in Cook and other counties will attend the sessions designed to help the teachers plan ecology programs for their students.

The workshops, which will be held between April 25 and May 25, will include both three-day and five-day sessions.

Camp Sagawau is an adult conservation education center sponsored by the Cook County Forest Preserve District.

The three-day workshops are geared to study of geology and geography, plant identification and pond studies. The teachers will concentrate on nature awareness activities, identifying plants, study of local soils, exploring the camp's limestone waterway and prairie restoration project, observing weather demonstrations, and gathering materials for classroom exhibits in a terrarium or aquarium.

The teachers also will participate in optional bird-watching hikes, fossil collecting and plaster-casting.

The five-day workshops concentrate on socio-economic aspects of geology and soils, on climate and on plant relationships in this area.

The effects of water pollution and waste disposal on the environment and a discussion of pond and marsh ecology and fisheries management is also included in the course.

The workshop also includes techniques for studying animal and human populations.

Information on registering for the workshops is available by calling Mrs. Bette Frueter at FO 9-9420.

CAR WAS PROBABLY A DOG: A pack of male dogs longing for a female hiding under a car in New York attacked the vehicle with such ferocity that a fender and hood caved in, a tire was chewed up, and the signal light wiring was destroyed. An insurance firm agreed to pay for the "canine quarrel."

WEIGHTY PROBLEM: Silent, an 18-year-old mutt in Livermore, Calif., is getting around easier now. A veterinarian surgically removed 287 pebbles, weighing nearly six pounds from the dog's stomach after his owner took him in for a check because he seemed sluggish.

BY GUM, WHAT A CRASH: Clifford Palmer of Los Angeles was driving along the highway recently when a wad of chewing gum stuck in his throat. He became dizzy and slumped over the steering wheel. The car, traveling 60 miles an hour, left the highway, became airborne for 75 feet, and splashed into a pond. A passing motorist pulled him from the partially submerged car. Palmer was in good condition at St. Joseph Hospital. The crash freed the gum from his throat.

MUGGER NEEDED PROTECTION: Sam Prochoren of Los Angeles is one 80-year-old mugger shouldn't fool around with. A bandit grabbed him, reached into his pocket and knocked him down. Prochoren whacked the mugger across the knees with his cane so hard the cane broke. He then stabbed the bandit in the legs with the splintered ends until he fled. Police nabbed the suspect several blocks away.

Just Politics...by Bob Lahey

For Percy, more candidates the better

Probably few persons could have welcomed the news that California Gov. Ronald Reagan will not seek election to the U.S. Senate in 1974 more than Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill.

Reagan's announcement that he will forego a campaign for the Senate and his plan for a national speaking tour signaled to most political observers the launching of a bid for the presidency.

Percy, who has all but admitted that he is doing what is now possible to put himself in line for the Republican presidential nomination, should welcome a Reagan candidacy.

Widespread belief that the nation is drifting on a tide of conservatism leads to the speculation that the three most likely to succeed in the GOP presidential race are Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, Reagan, and Texan John Connally, notwithstanding the fact that he hasn't even got his membership card as a Republican yet.

IF INDEED the conservative sentiment is prevalent by the time of the primary elections in 1976, probably any one of those three candidates would be formidable opponents for Percy in a head-to-head contest.

Nothing could suit him better, it would seem, than to have all three on the same ballot trying to out-conservative each other, leaving Percy to harvest the liberal (he prefers the term moderate) votes within the GOP.

To hear Percy tell it there are potential presidents practically anywhere one looks in the Republican party. To the names of the other three, he will add a laundry list including Sen. Edwin Brooke of Massachusetts; Sen. Robert Taft of Ohio; a pair of Tennesseans, Senators Howard Baker and William Brock; Gov. William Milliken of Michigan; Mayor Richard Lugar of Indianapolis; and, yes, Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York.

Against many combinations of all those potential candidates, there are ways to picture Percy as the candidate who stands apart from the others. Besides the conservative-moderate division which would separate him from the "top three," there are other factors which set him apart in varying degrees.

These include: AGE (Rockefeller, at 65, and Reagan, at 62, are considered by many too old to be eligible for the nomination three years hence. Lugar is only 41; Brock, 43. Percy is 53.)

Fame. (How many people really ever heard of Richard Lugar, William Brock or William Milliken?)

Race. Does anybody seriously contemplate that the GOP could nominate a black man in 1976?)

If those factors should indeed eliminate most of the candidates on Percy's speculative list, only two, Taft and Agnew, would remain.

Sen. Taft bears a name revered by conservatives, but is himself moderate (or liberal, if you prefer) enough to cut into votes that might otherwise go to Percy. If the conservative field were left to Agnew alone, it seems unlikely that Percy could make a contest of it.

For Sen. Percy, the more candidates the better.

The very same "professional Indians" who wrecked the Bureau of Indian Affairs building last November in Washington are occupying the town of Wounded Knee, S.D.

They are shooting at U.S. marshals and holding 11 civilian hostages — including a Catholic priest.

Their organization is called AIM (American Indian Movement) and the nation's 48 million Catholics should be interested to learn $40,000 of their church's money was given to this organization in September, 1971 by the $50,000 Campaign for Human Development.

This money was given to AIM despite the impressive number of felony convictions accumulated by AIM leaders Dennis Banks and the Bellecourt brothers, Vernon and Clyde. (Also present in Wounded Knee is handsome, pigtailed AIM leader Russell Means, who last January was arrested in Scottsbluff, Neb., on charges of being drunk, disorderly, resisting arrest and carrying a concealed weapon.) When asked about the propriety of giving the Catholic Church's money to such gangsters, Robert Carvajal, the Campaign's assistant director of allocations, replied indignantly:

"We don't fund people or groups — we fund projects."

IF CATHOLICS are outraged by such use of their church's money and by such preposterous explanations from their denomination's professional spenders like Carvajal, they are not alone in having been taken by this band of tin-horn Geronimos (whom one Sioux Tribal Chairman, accompanied by 400 legitimate members of the tribe, threatened to drive out of Wounded Knee.)

The Mormon Church supplied $1,000 worth of food and $150 worth of gas — "but we had no idea whatsoever of the plunder they were planning in Washington," according to Wendell J. Ashton of the Mormon's headquarters in Salt Lake City.

United Methodist headquarters in New York seemed proud their denomination contributed $4,500 to the AIM-dominated Trail of Broken Treaties caravan.

AND IN SEATTLE, Episcopal Bishop Ivo I. Curtis defended his having approved $10,000 in Episcopal funding of this caravan. "These people are not hoodlums," he wrote three weeks after the Bureau of Indian Affairs building was wrecked (even to the extent of its urinals being smashed), "many of them are young and a few of them went to college."

Bishop Curtis has noted financing of the Trail of Broken Treaties caravan was handled by Seattle's Ecumenical Metropolitan Ministries — whose offices are in his own diocesan house. This organization was warned in advance about AIM's dominating the caravan — and about AIM's conduct on the Sioux Reservation the previous spring — by the Rev. George Pierce of the Episcopal mission in Pine Ridge, S.D.

AIM was responsible, according to Rev. Pierce, for:

"The disruption and demoralization of our local school, as well as the intrusion of our hospital and jail. They beat a Methodist minister so badly as to put him in the hospital, they vandalized a store and the museum in the nearby town of Wounded Knee; and in Fort Totten they released prisoners from the jail, including two felons just convicted of raping Indian ladies."

ONE OF THE teachers at the disrupted Pine Ridge school is the sister-in-law of the nation's only Indian Episcopal Bishop, the Rt. Rev. Harold Jones of Rapid City. Bishop Jones told this column he had never been consulted by Bishop Curtis or anyone from the National Episcopal headquarters about this funding.

The Reverend Webster Two Hawk is another Episcopal clergyman who was never consulted, even though he is President of the National Tribal Chairman's Association (representing 150 tribes). This organization, he told this column, opposed both the Broken Treaty caravan and AIM. "We have called for an investigation of the finances of AIM," he said.

Real mystic experience for all, theologian says

by LOUIS CASSELS

Mystical experience is real and is available to all who truly seek it.

That assurance comes from Methodism's woman theologian, Dr. Georgia Harkness in her new book, "Mysticism — Its Meaning and Message," she says the current upsurge of popular interest in mysticism can be a great thing — provided people understand what genuine mysticism is, and what it is not.

"Mysticism is not astrology, fortune-telling, clairvoyance, or spiritualism in any of the forms usually connoted by this term."

It is not mental telepathy or anything which commonly goes by the name of extra-sensory perception. It is not visions, auditions, locations, or raptures. In short, it is not something supernatural or supernatural in the sense of occult," she says.

HER OWN definition of mysticism is "communion of the human spirit with God," saying that this communion with God is "the very life of religion."

"Without such communion, religion may still exist as ritualistic folkways, or injunctions to morality, or as the social imperatives of human behavior including many sturdy efforts to remake the world," Dr. Harkness says.

"These pursuits are by no means to be disparaged. Given the right goals, they are vitally important. Yet without communion with God, in which mysticism centers, religion fades out and secularism reigns," she said.

Dr. Harkness repudiates the common notion mystical experience is a rare state "in which one is lifted out of himself and his world and into a state of ecstasy in which he sees visions and hears supernatural voices."

WHILE SOME mystics have such experiences, she says, mystical experience also occurs with equal validity in the lives of ordinary persons as they engage in "personal prayer and worship" and as they learn through constant practice to recognize the presence of God in all events and activities of their everyday lives.

Mystical experience, in this sense of direct and intimate awareness of living in the presence of God, is open to anyone who is willing to pay the price, she says, but it "costs more of us than we are usually willing to give."

"Full communion with God involves a self-giving that claims the entire person, thinking, feeling, willing and doing," Dr. Harkness asserts. The first requirement is simple "purity of heart and life" — a sincere striving for "human goodness" in daily life and personal relationships.

There also must be readiness to surrender one's own will, ambitions and desires completely to the will of God. This does not necessarily mean renouncing all worldly pleasures. It just means putting God — and the desire for communion with him above all else in our scale of values.

SOME MYSTICAL experiences may occur spontaneously and unexpectedly. But most are the result of careful preparation which involves an earnest endeavor "to quiet one's mind and conflicting emotions so that one can hear the voice and feel the presence of God," says Dr. Harkness.

"So difficult is this to do with any thoroughness that most of us do not make the effort, whatever our so-called devotions," she says adding the effort is well worth making, for it "can be the assurance that one does not have to carry his burdens alone."

Children learn about life from death

by DAVID HENDIN
Fourth in a Series

When a member of the immediate family dies, what should a child be told? Should the child be told the facts, lied to a little or kept from the truth altogether? Does a child comprehend death? Should he mourn with the family? How is he expected to act? These are but a few of the myriad questions regarding death that parents will ask.

If it is difficult for parents, as mature adults, to accept the inevitability of death, then it is even more difficult for children to comprehend.

Modern ways of living complicate the situation because so many people pass through childhood and adolescence without experiencing the loss by death of a single person close to them. The aged and infirm are put into institutions, and grandparents rarely live under the same roof with grandchildren. The majority of hospitals have strict visiting rules, generally (and perhaps unfortunately) ex-

pet or animal will make the experience an easier one to explain and understand. Too many loving parents, in their haste to save their children from all things that may be unpleasant, try to protect them from pain and grief. If a pet turtle or goldfish dies it is hurriedly replaced with a new one, in the hope that the child will not notice the difference. If a pet dog, cat or bird dies, parents rush to replace it with "nicer" and more expensive animals.

WHAT, THOUGH, ARE the lessons that a child learns from early experiences of loss of this type? Will a youngster conclude, perhaps, that the loss of a close relative or friend is not of great importance — that the emotion of love, which has been fostered in him from birth, can be turned off and on, transferred quickly, and loyalties easily switched?

"A child should not be deprived of his right to grieve and to mourn. He should be free to feel sorrow in the loss of someone loved. The child's humanity is deepened, and his character ennobled, when he can lament the end of life and love," says Dr. Halm Ginott.

In general, wise parents realize that children should not be excluded from sharing grief and sorrow any more than they should be from sharing joy and happiness in the course of normal family relationships. When a death in the family occurs, and a child is not told exactly what has happened, he may become confused and feel great anxiety. He may fill his knowledge gap with figments of his imagination, usually far more bizarre than the truth could ever be and more frightening to the child. These childhood fantasies can be carried into maturity.

"Children are excluded from the sharing of sadness on the pretext that it would be too much for them. But the result is not protection. They are denied a potentially beautiful experience that can unify and strengthen a family," says Dr. Elisabeth Kubler-Ross, a pioneer in the study of death and dying.

A FREQUENTLY asked question in this context is: "Should we take the child to the funeral?" According to the Rev. Edgar Jackson, who has written on religion and psychological experience, "Children love a parade, and a funeral is a private family parade from the deathbed to the hole in the ground, or crematorium."

Professionals generally agree if the child is old enough to understand what is taking place, he should be offered the opportunity to take part in the ceremony marking the end of the life of a person who was close to him.

Young children who are too fidgety should probably not be permitted to attend, but older children may be encouraged — but never forced — to attend the service. A child who resists going to the funeral should not be made to feel guilty. His questions about the ceremonies should be answered in a straightforward and truthful manner and he may be told that if he wishes he can go to the cemetery to visit the grave later.

A parent or relative should not be distressed that a child attending a funeral will witness crying and grieving, for it is at times like these that a child learns that having and expressing such feelings are normal. The facts of life, in fact, are that adults do cry.

LIKE THE ADULT, the child has a need to work through his grief and anxieties. He should share his feelings, both positive and negative, about the deceased with the family. His recollections of the dead person should be encouraged as should participation in discussions with the family about the future. Neither children nor adults can grieve normally without such an outward expression of sorrow as well as the sympathy, support and understanding of others.

If children are not allowed to share grief and sadness, serious emotional problems can arise. When 5½-year-old Tony's mother suddenly died he was sent to stay with relatives until after the funeral. No explanation was given. When his father came for him a week later, Tony was told that he would never see his mother again because she had gone to heaven.

The boy began to question his father, but he noticed that the questions made his father extremely uncomfortable. Confused, the youngster ceased his questioning. He became afraid of strangers, began to wet his bed and wake up with nightmares. Tony had to be taken out of kindergarten because of uncontrollable temper tantrums, and he would never ride in a car without his father. With time these symptoms subsided, but years later Tony became a very depressed person.

OFTEN A PARENT may become too dependent on children after the loss of a spouse, and this too can prevent proper grieving in children. When Tom was 13, his father died of a heart attack. The youngster was forced to play a supportive role because initially his mother could not cope with the loss. For weeks she was all but incapacitated, and unable to help her two young daughters. Tom made the funeral arrangements and comforted his sisters and mother.

"Everyone cried on my shoulder," he recalls. "By the time they were through and I wanted to mourn, it seemed inappropriate."

Children, in other words, should be allowed to remain children even though they must be spoken to frankly and honestly.

"The Victorians may well have terrified children with their realistic descriptions of dying and death and with their details of God and of hell and heaven," says British pediatrician Dr. Simon Yudkin, "but we allow them to be terrified by our secrecy and by our private and often futile misery."

A newspaper columnist was dialing her FM radio. She paused. Then listened. The next day she just couldn't wait to get to her typewriter. What she wrote in her column speaks more eloquently than we can about WMM-FM's Voices of Love. "I caught it by chance . . . a soothing moment of beautiful words and music, to remind us that in this crazy world, one of the important things left in life, the only commodity no one can live without is love . . . I wish it could start a whole new movement among sponsors, a movement to give us beautiful things for beauty's sake, once in a while . . ." Tonight, during those private, quiet hours, listen to the Voices of Love Heart-to-heart talk. Beautiful music. A pleasant, poignant pause in a runaway world. To you with love WMM-FM 92.7.

Group programs available

Chicago and North Western offers 'train-walk' tours

Five new "train-short walk" tours at bargain prices are being offered by the Chicago and North Western Transportation Co. In its 1973 group tour program.

The new short-walk tours feature a train ride into Chicago from any of the outlying suburban stations and a short walk to: The First National Bank; the Main Post Office; the Mercantile Exchange; City Hall — Civic Center; and Quaker Oats test kitchens. All are within a few blocks of North Western Station at Madison and Canal.

The "short-walk" and other tours are described in a new brochure being sent to 2,000 schools, Boy Scout troops, Girl Scout troops, women's clubs, chambers of commerce and a similar groups. All tours feature reduced train fares for groups of all ages on various excursion trips.

IN ADDITION to the "short-walk" tours, the railroad is again offering train-boat tours with the Wendella Sightseeing Co. Groups ride into Chicago on the Northwestern's air-conditioned, double-decker commuter cars, then walk directly to the boat docks for a ride in a 65-foot sightseeing boat along the Chicago River or even out into Lake Michigan. A unique feature of the train-boat tours is that the groups do not have to cross a single street in Chicago.

Other tours include train rides either into Chicago or to the opposite end of the line, and 11 points of interest have been added to the coordinated train-bus tours to such popular Chicago attractions as the Adler Planetarium, the Field Museum, Lincoln Park Zoo, the Museum of Science and Industry, Chicago Police Department headquarters, Chicago newspaper plants, and many others, or a sight-seeing tour of beautiful Chicago. Chartered buses meet trains at North Western Station, take the groups to the selected locations, then return them to the station for the trip back home.

Interested groups can obtain copies of the brochure or further information by writing or calling the North Western.

Your teen-ager act weird?
He may be on narcotics

Has your once alert, friendly, studious teenager developed a Jekyll and Hyde personality?

Is he or she cheerful one day and depressed the next? Have you noticed an abnormal inclination to drowsiness and irritability, an inability to concentrate and a tendency to tell little white lies?

If your child displays any of these characteristics, you may have cause to worry, for he may be on the road to narcotics addiction — if, indeed, he is not already "hooked."

Because of widespread parental concern about drugs, the safety research department of the Combined Insurance Company of America consulted experts on narcotics to produce a set of symptoms to look for in detecting addiction.

"Actually, the signs of addiction are easy to spot, if one is really looking for them," said W. Clement Stone, chairman and chief executive officer of Combined, who has been associated with juvenile narcotics work for more than a decade.

STONE is an adviser to Teen Challenge, a nationwide organization that works with juvenile narcotics addicts. It is headed by the Rev. David Wilkerson, the evangelist.

Generally speaking, Stone said, Teen Challenge has found that heroin addicts display some or all of these symptoms:

Needle marks on arms or legs, watery eyes, furtive glances, chronic drowsiness, marked restlessness, upset stomach, ulcerous sores, strong body odor, habitual scratching or nose-rubbing, frequent dizziness, mental and physical deterioration, spells of preoccupation or talkativeness, depression and despondency and a persecution complex.

Government narcotics experts in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and the National Institute of Mental Health described some obvious symptoms of the use of amphetamines, or speed. There is a tendency to talk loud and fast and pace the floor. Loss of appetite, irritability and instability also are the marks of the "speedfreak," along with lethargy, fatigue, muscle pains and depression that can lead to suicide.

A person high on LSD has an increased pulse and heart rate, higher blood pressure and temperature, dilated pupils and cold, sweaty, trembling hands and feet. A pallor, chills and goose pimples often develop, along with a wet mouth, irregular breathing, nausea and loss of appetite.

PUBLIC ANNOUNCEMENT

Marvin Frank announces that Frank Jewelers is holding the line on prices of gold and diamond jewelry. The recent devaluation of the American dollar abroad has brought drastic increases in prices of diamonds and gold in the market throughout the world. Today Frank Jewelers is holding the line on prices in spite of these increases. If you plan any purchases of diamonds, gold jewelry or gem stones within the next few months as a hedge against inflation, and devaluation of your dollars, it would be wise for you to make your purchase at this time, before price increases take effect.

Frank Jewelers recommends the purchase of diamonds, emeralds, rubies, and sapphires, jade and other gem stones for investment.

Buy with confidence at Frank Jewelers.

DuBrow on TV...by Rick DuBrow

Some 'comedies' are more depressing than dramas

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—No one really expects high statistical ratings from a television production like Eugene O'Neill's "Long Day's Journey into Night," which ABC-TV put on recently.

But what is appalling is to hear friends and neighbors say in advance, with uncomfortable shrugs, that they don't think they'll watch it because they don't feel like being depressed.

There is a rather weird public attitude that just because a show is demanding and/or heavy as a drama that it must be, perforce, depressing as well.

It is difficult to believe that such a view actually is held by intelligent persons, no matter how hard their days may be at the office or in the kitchen.

"LONG DAY'S Journey into Night," as presented by ABC-TV with Laurence Olivier and Constance Cummings was, to me, an exhilarating experience — not a happy view of people, surely, but thrilling in its execution as a theatrical work.

Dramas have no corner on the depression market. There are comedies and musicals that make one ashamed for the human race, that make one cringe in disbelief at its stupidity. In short, they are depressing beyond words despite laugh tracks and applause.

For example, ABC-TV's "The Brady Bunch," an alleged comedy series, is my idea of a genuinely depressing television show.

Another ABC-TV series, "Temperatures Rising," about shenanigans in a hospital, is also billed as humor, and it, too, is a charter member of my list of depressing video shows.

And so is CBS-TV's "Bridget Loves Bernie," a so-called comedy series in which the strained and repetitious themes involving an Irish Catholic family and a Jewish family, brought together by intermarriage, are tiresome.

I NOTICE THAT the three video series I have brought up here all are supposed to be humorous, but I defy anyone to come up with a more depressing group of shows anywhere.

As it happens, for pre-view purposes, I saw "Long Day's Journey into Night" in advance of its network airing. Four nights later, I was home when the broadcast of the show began on ABC-TV, and I started watching it again, this time with my family, and before I knew it I was hooked and sat through the whole program once more.

The play is tragic, and it is certainly heavy and demanding, but, performed as it was, it was also a marvel of theatrical skill. That excellence and the tremendous communion one could feel with the sad characters of O'Neill's autobiographical play were the lasting and overwhelming impressions of the drama.

An act of purity and cleansing and unforgettable art can never be depressing.

The Hollywood Scene

by Vernon Scott

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — It takes extraordinary courage or a touch of lunacy for a performer to disappear voluntarily from the spotlight.

Once gone, they are quickly forgotten. For instance, what happened to those three pretty girls on "Petticoat Junction"? What of Carroll Baker?

Tina Louise is another case in point. She played Ginger for three years in "Gilligan's Island," made some movies, guests on a dozen television shows and was on the ascendancy when, poof, she vanished.

"For two years and nine months I didn't do any acting at all," said Tina. She fished around in her handbag to explain why. After a moment Tina produced a snapshot of a beautiful child.

"This is Caprice," the actress said. "When I had my baby I had to make a choice. Either I continued working or I took some time out to become a good mother and to give my child real security."

"Now Caprice is going to nursery school and I feel free enough to begin working again," Tina went on. "But I wouldn't accept any long locations that would separate us."

FOR THOSE WHO can't recall Tina Louise, she is a tall (5-foot-9 inch) redhead with green eyes and a smoldering look. She moves with lithe grace and is exceptionally well endowed.

As Ginger she was a languid, not-too-bright movie star. Off-screen she is an intense woman who is working her way back toward the spotlight.

Her first major appearance was in the television movie "Call to Danger" with Peter Graves. The film is actually a spinoff for Graves, if it is well-received, who would star in a weekly series.

"Therefore, 'Call to Danger' is a showcase for Graves. Not Tina.

"I understood that from the beginning," she said. "But I'm not ready to think about another television series. It would take too much of my time away from Caprice."

"I could function as a model again. Or I could do commercials. But I want to act, particularly in drama."

CURIOUSLY, Tina didn't miss the spotlight so much as she did the desire to work.

"Acting isn't an easy path for a female," she said. "I enjoy studying acting in classes, as I did at the Actor's Studio. That's the real fun for me."

Tina Louise says she is still happy but somewhat less ecstatic about buckling down to work with the cameras whirling.

Ab Mikva still waging fight for ethics

by BOB LAHEY

Abner Joseph Mikva has been up to the Hill, and now he is back again.

A few short weeks ago, he looked from his office on Capitol Hill upon the vista of the Republic's center of government. Now he gazes from a LaSalle Street law office through a fire escape at a musty brick wall across the alley.

It is a comfortable office, not yet quite furnished, buried in one of those legal labyrinths which cover whole floors of Chicago office buildings. The name on the door reads "D'Andrea, Pflaum, Wyatt & Riskind." When the name Mikva is added, as it presumably will be, there will be few segments of the melting pot unrepresented there.

Always at ease, whether battling for legislation or reelection, Mikva, shed now of the responsibilities of legislator or congressman is downright relaxed.

HIS DRESS, moderately conservative when he was a member of Congress, has gone to conservatively mod. The suit is maroonish plaid with a hint of pink, and has wide lapels framing a bright pastel knit shirt.

Mikva sits with one foot cocked on the padded leather swivel chair, a long thin cigar jutting from the center of his mouth and talks with just a hint of wistfulness — regret is too strong a word — about the political career which began more than 16 years ago, when he entered the Illinois General Assembly as a representative from Chicago's South Side.

The directory of the 70th General Assembly, which convened in 1967, shows a crew-cut, flat-topped, wrinkle-free 30-year-old who might have been sitting for a college graduation portrait. Sixteen years have added the proper number of lines to his face and the hair is now tinged with grey, sprouting abundantly from his head and fashioned into bushy sideburns.

But there is still a boyish enthusiasm when he speaks of things to which he is going on to now that he has been required to put away congressional things.

In the immediate future, Mikva will function as chairman of the newly created board of ethics which will oversee conduct of members of the executive branch of government.

"SO IN THE broadest sense," he explains, "I will still have a public office. I said on election night (and here he interjects a phrase which hints at the pain of losing — 'to the extent that I was able to speak rationally') that I was not turning my back on public things; I enjoy them too much."

So the public thing that he will devote his attention to now is ethics in government. It is not a new topic to Abner Mikva.

Back in 1956, he and some of his colleagues introduced the word ethics to the jargon of Illinois politics and it rang strangely in the ears of many of the people who then ran state government and fell deaf on others.

Mikva and colleagues were known then as "The Young Turks" who had invaded the halls of the Capitol and were making noises like they were going to clean up government. Their names — Paul Simon, Tony Scariano, Bob Mann — crop up frequently in conversation with Mikva when he recalls how these impetuous young legislators were "talking about cleaning up racetracks, getting ethics legislation and right-to-know laws."

They had front-row seats at the side-shows produced and directed by Orville Hodge and Paul Powell and surely knew more of them than the people who kept electing those two now infamous public servants — but still they didn't know enough to be able to stop them.

AND MIKVA, FROM a vantage point of 16 years, has no illusions that an ethics board in the executive branch of state government can guarantee that there will never be another Orville Hodge or Paul Powell.

"We have to remember that the beginning point of all this is not to try to weed crooks out of government, because we all know that a code of ethics would not have kept the Orville Hodge or the Paul Powells from doing what they did," namely, to relieve the taxpayers of Illinois of several million dollars.

"A code of ethics has two purposes: first, to set a standard for those employees and officials of the state who want to perform in an ethical manner; and, secondly, to assure the public that there really are honest people in state government."

Mikva, again from the vantage point of 16 years, believes that an overwhelming majority of public employees are honest and dedicated.

It is his purpose to demonstrate that by setting visible standards for those in public office. "We are going to try to reassure the public, not by giving them pabulum, but to be able to show them, 'This is what the man has, this is what he earns, this is what he does for the state.'"

It will not prevent all future scandal, Mikva knows.

"BUT HOPEFULLY, when scandal occurs, people will have a better perspective."

"When Paul Simon for years was disclosing his income and his assets, he was the exception in state government. When people would cynically talk about corruption and cite Paul Powell, you could say that he was only one man, and you could point to Paul Simon. And then they would say that he was only one man."

"If we can show that there really are a LOT of Paul Simons, that people who work for the state are honest and concerned about the public interest, we will have accomplished something."

State government is better today than it was 16 years ago, Mikva believes. He entered the legislature at the beginning of the second administration of Gov. William G. Stratton, around the time that State Auditor Orville Hodge was found with his hand in the till.

Abner Mikva, 1956

Paul Powell, whose hand in the till was not detected until after his death, was then between terms as speaker of the House.

Legislative salaries then were $5,000 a year and Powell, Mikva recalls, was an adamant opponent of the perennial efforts to raise the pay level.

"I REMEMBER him getting up on the floor of the House and telling the legislature, 'You keep a-raising that pay and somebody good is going to run against you. Then you'll be sorry.'"

In those days, much more than now, there were "hangers-on" milling about the halls of the Capitol who seemed to prosper in mysterious ways.

"The lobbyists used to hang on the rail (of the corridor adjoining the House chambers), smoking their big black cigars and calling signals for what they wanted the legislators to do."

The problem then was retaining honest legislators who could make considerably more money in other pursuits with the time they had to devote to state government.

"The prevailing reason for people leaving was because they couldn't afford to stay. There were many who were honest and legitimate and played according to Hoyle."

"But the other kind seemed to find it very attractive to be down there. The stated pay wasn't very much, but for some the real pay seemed to be very good."

That situation began to improve, Mikva said, as legislative salaries began to climb.

"I think the best bargain the people of the State of Illinois ever got was when they started to pay their state legislators enough to start bringing in a better class of talent."

AT $17,500, MIKVA believes, legislative salaries are still a trifle low, but they do enable bright young people to take the time from their other careers to involve themselves in the legislature. His favorite example is Rep. Joseph Lundy, D-Evanston, former Mikva legislative assistant, a 32-year-old lawyer now serving his first term in the legislature.

The full-time talents of people like Lundy are "a bargain for the people," at $17,500 a year, says Mikva. "Of course some of them are overpaid at that rate. But then some of them would be overpaid at $5,000."

In short, Mikva is optimistic about the improving climate of the legislature and of state government generally.

"Sure, there are still clowns around there, and all kinds of kooky things happen. But overall the picture is much better than it was when I was fussing with ethics legislation back in the '50s."

Mikva is equally optimistic about the atmosphere of open government which his new boss, Gov. Daniel Walker, is attempting to create. Mikva's ethics board will have no jurisdiction over legislators or other elected officials. But he believes the tone that the board can set in the executive branch through executive orders of the governor will have a beneficial effect throughout the Capitol.

MIKVA'S ASSOCIATION with Walker goes back to 1961, when Mikva was law clerk to U.S. Supreme Court Justice Sherman Minton and Walker served in the same capacity to Chief Justice Fred Vinson. They later worked together as aides to former Gov. Adlai Stevenson. Walker as a staff member and Mikva as a campaign volunteer.

Of Walker, Mikva says, "No man ever went into that Statehouse freer — not only of strings — but of assumed strings." Walker's disassociation of himself from the regular Democratic powerhouse both in Chicago and in Downstate strongholds, will leave him free to set a high tone for state government, Mikva says.

Walker's shunning of party regulars and his abdication of some traditional prerogatives — like taking his name off highway signs and storing the governor's state Cadillacs — are irritants to the old guard, Mikva concedes.

"But they may enable him to muster public support. Every chief executive yearns for the power to go to the people for the support to override the legislature. The last governor who had it in this state was Henry Horner (1933-37); the last President who had it was FDR."

In the battle to win the support of the public, Abner Mikva will be out in the front trying to establish a perimeter of confidence in public officials.

"What we're attacking is a state of mind. We've got to convince people that government does work."

Abner J. Mikva, optimist

"....I'm not turning my back on public things."

"We're attacking a state of mind."

The Doctor Says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb—Is it possible to correct a hernia of the lower abdomen without surgery or hospitalization? A man told me he had a hernia corrected in this manner.

Dear Reader—There are a number of things that are done to people to correct problems in the lower abdomen area which aren't necessarily hernias, such as withdrawal of fluid from a sac in the scrotum. But the only real way to correct a hernia in that area is surgical.

The hernia occurs because the muscles and tendons around the lower abdomen in this area are torn and stretched. The most common problem then is that a loop of bowel slips out along the same area that the cord to the testicle comes out from a hole in the abdomen. The loop of intestine can then slip out through the lower part of the abdomen and into the scrotal sac.

In women there is a structure comparable to the cord which also is associated with a weakening of the lower abdominal wall but it's usually not as much of a problem as in men. The loop of bowel, if it's out, has to be placed back in the abdomen (they usually slide in and out anyway unless they become strangulated) and then the torn and over-stretched ligaments and muscles have to be properly relocated, and sutured in place. If the sutures hold and the structures don't stretch or tear again then the hernia is corrected.

Some people use a truss and external devices but in most instances, if the patient's condition permits it, I believe that surgery is the proper answer.

Dear Dr. Lamb—In one of your future articles will you explain the reason you specifically said use fortified skim milk for drinking purposes but use nonfat milk for cooking? Is it because of the better taste of skin milk only?

We have been drinking the dry milk fortified with vitamins A and D for years and would like to continue to do so. However, if something of nutritional value is missing we would switch to skim milk.

Dear Reader—There is nothing wrong at all with drinking reconstituted dry milk. Most people just don't like it as well as fortified skim milk. Even plain skim milk doesn't taste as good to some people as some of the fine fortified skim milk products marketed in recent times.

The dry milk has some advantages in cooking over liquid skim milk. For one thing, you can prepare a nonfat gravy with water and beat in the milk powder at the last minute and avoid scorching the milk. This can be done in almost any other dish where heating milk is part of the preparation.

Then you can add more nonfat milk powder than the usual amount recommended for preparing milk. In this way you have a richer product with more calcium and more protein in whatever dish you are preparing. You can, for example, use a half-cup of powder rather than a third of a cup of powder to one cup of water.

The Lighter Side...by Dick West

It's long past time to protect the press's tresses

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Washington press corps was thrown into panic this week by a report that a White House aide pulled a syndicated columnist's hair in a movie theater last spring.

The alleged incident, related in the April issue of Atlantic Monthly, appears to add a new dimension to current congressional hearings on threats to freedom of the press.

It is no secret that many journalists here, including columnist Nicholas Thimmesch, have let their hair grow rather long. Has this made them more vulnerable to intimidation by government officials?

That question undoubtedly will be given careful consideration by the appropriate congressional committees in the days ahead.

ACCORDING TO an article by David Wise, a local journalist and author, someone grabbed Thimmesch's hair from behind and yanked his head back against the seat while he was attending a private screening of "The Godfather" at the Motion Picture Association of America headquarters.

Wise identified the alleged lock-tugger as Presidential assistant H. R. Haldeman, about whom Thimmesch had written a somewhat critical profile, including a reference to Haldeman's crewcut.

Publication of the allegation happened to coincide with congressional hearings on legislation to give reporters the right to protect the privacy of their news sources.

Some of my colleagues feel the legislation should now be broadened to protect their tresses as well. But strict constructionists argue that such a law would be an unwarranted extension of the Constitution.

"The 1st Amendment only forbids laws abridging freedom of the press," one constitutional expert pointed out. "It doesn't say anything about menace to their manes."

OTHER AUTHORITIES contend remedies are available without resort of congressional action. Long-haired newsmen could, for example, keep their mops out of the clutches of administration officials by wearing snoods to the theater.

I personally am withholding judgment pending further clarification. For there is a possibility the molestation of Thimmesch was a case of mistaken identity rather than media harassment.

Or maybe Thimmesch's hairdo was blocking Haldeman's view of the screen.

In any event, when Thimmesch turned around to see who was wrestling his ringlets, Haldeman is quoted as saying, "Oh, pardon me, I thought it was a girl sitting there."

That is called making him an apology he couldn't refuse.

Win At Bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

Oswald "One of the most important principles of successful bidding is to learn to pass when things aren't developing in a satisfactory way."

Jim: "There was nothing wrong with South's opening bid. He would have liked a few more high cards but 12 points and 5-4 distribution is usually going to lead to a good contract."

Oswald: "The two-diamond response did not really hurt South's hand. In any event it was forcing and he made his correct rebid of two hearts."

Jim: "North made the normal continuation to two-no-trump and now South was unhappy. He had a three-suit hand and just did not like the idea of playing at two no-trump. He was sure that three clubs would be a better contract and bid it."

Oswald: "He was right about that. Three clubs made easily. Unfortunately for North and South it did not become the final contract. North took South right to five clubs and East decided to double. There wasn't much to the play and defense. East took two trump tricks, two aces and 500 points above the line."

We can't be sure how the play would have gone at two no-trump. North might well have made it or he might well have gone down one. The important thing to realize is that there is no way that East and West could have picked up that tidy 500 points against a two no-trump contract.

'Zoom's' won part of battle

Now even the kids have caught a taste of Washington's desire to have things all its own way in this country.

In a little-noticed announcement recently, the White House's Corporation for Public Broadcasting (CPB) revealed it was pulling supports from under the children's program, "Zoom."

The program, which went on Public Broadcasting System air (Channel 11 in Chicago) almost a year ago, has been getting some $700.00 of its $1.1 million operating budget from CPB. The remainder, in the past, has come from the Ford Foundation.

"Zoom," however, was not going to die without a fuss. The CPB received 152,212 letters from youthful viewers of the early evening program, and suddenly CPB's attitude changed dramatically.

On March 1, CPB announced that it would provide half of the needed funding for "Zoom." The program still needs about $565,000 in funding, but that money is expected to come from foundation sources.

Not funded, however, were two politically disparate programs, Bill Moyers' Journal and William F. Buckley's Firing Line. The non-funding will remove from the air two men who have in common the criticism of President Richard Nixon.

In part, the heat placed on these three programs is an example of the kind of ominous pressure directed against the media during the reign of President Nixon.

A welcome setback

The decision by Pan American World Airways and Trans World Airlines to drop their options to buy the Anglo-French supersonic Concorde airliner was not a "mortal blow," according to Sir George Edwards, chairman of the British Aircraft Corporation.

He did concede, however, that it was "a hell of a setback." It leaves firm orders for only nine of the controversial planes from British Overseas Airways and Air France.

But the only reason the action was not a mortal blow is that the Concorde is being underwritten by the taxpayers of Britain and France, whose government-run airlines are obligated to purchase it no matter what kind of white elephant it turns out to be.

Any time a project is beyond the financial capabilities of private enterprise, not to mention when it is surrounded by serious questions about its environmental impact, as the supersonic airliner is, that is the time for government to hesitate before rushing in with pounds or francs or dollars.

There are exceptions of course, such as America's moon-landing and other space programs. Nor is there anything inherently wrong

The examples are quickly remembered: Nixon's criticism of television programming, Vice President Agnew's salvo against TV newsmen, Clay Whitehead's suggestion that networks can be hit through tighter control of local programming. And there are other examples.

But why the pressure against "Zoom" and not the well-established "Sesame Street?"

Maybe — as has been suggested — it's as simple as the fact that "Zoom" is filmed in Boston (make what you want of that).

Or maybe — as also has been suggested — it's the nature of "Zoom," a free-wheeling, casual, unstructured kind of program that survives on children sending in ideas, and in the process may make more that one feel a bit more liberated than the basically structured, education-oriented format of "Sesame Street."

An extreme estimate would be a pattern in which the President of the United States decides what he likes and doesn't like on TV, and uses the weight of his office to make TV conform.

Perhaps such an estimate is extreme, but the point is that there is a pattern, and it has overtones that millions of persons in this country may not even recognize.

Those who have recognized — and those are mainly children — and those are mainly children — the threat have struck a small but important blow for "Zoom." It is the kind of small but important blow upon which basic freedoms in this country are grounded.

with government subsidization of essentially private ventures.

It was done with the railroads through land grants. It has been and is being done with every other kind of transportation, as well as a host of other things.

Yet there has to be the prospect of an eventual payoff — not necessarily in terms of financial return to the government but in terms of benefit to the public at large.

What killed America's own supersonic airliner, or at least stunned it for the time being, was not its immense cost but the fact that it is not at all certain that it would be commercially feasible or would meet any real need. The same reasoning was behind the decision of TWA and Pan Am.

The doubters, whether they be cost accountants or environmentalists, may be proved wrong when the 1,400-mile-per-hour Concorde goes into service in 1975. Or maybe sooner, if Russia's supersonic TU-144 starts flying next year.

But until that happens, these governments are taking an expensive gamble and should not really be surprised that nobody else wants to gamble with them.

Fence post letters to the editor

Hall defends townships

Mr. William B. Rose's Fence post letter printed in the Herald Tuesday, March 13, contains the usual false and malicious statements against township government.

The only two completely true facts were his admissions that we Republicans want good economical government and that the Democratic party is in favor of abolishment of township government.

Contrary to his statement, abolishment of township government would not abolish taxes but would, instead, bring about an immediate and substantial tax increase and a disastrous reduction in services to residents of both incorporated and unincorporated areas. Functions of the township would be turned over to Cook County — an obsolete, inefficient, uneconomical government, controlled by the strongest political machine in the country.

As a self-proclaimed spokesman for this infamous political machine, whose very existence depends upon patronage, it certainly takes audacity for Mr. Rose to bring up the subject of patronage. But, since he did, we're glad to publicly state our hiring policy:

"Every person is hired to do a job which fulfills a needed service and a person is hired only if he or she has the necessary experience, background and expertise to carry out that job in the most efficient manner."

We run our office in the most efficient, business-like manner possible. If anyone wants to argue against that policy, that's their prerogative.

And Mr. Rose wants to talk about our platform. Fine! Each year the township has added to and improved the quality of services provided its citizens and we pledge to continue to improve these services during the next four years, with no tax increase. He may be critical but we're proud of the fact that we've been able to reduce the 1973-74 tax rate by 10 per cent, while, at the same time, improving services. We have one of the finest general assistance and highway maintenance programs in the state and we pledge to continue the high quality of these services. We'll continue to watch the Democratic Party's county assessor to make sure there is honest and fair property evaluations so all the individual homeowners of Elk Grove Township receive maximum benefit from the township's commercial and industrial developments. Whether Mr. Rose and those he supports approve or not we'll fully back our pledge to continue to be concerned with ecology, to solve our problems through local home rule and to work for expansion of township government.

If Mr. Rose did his homework a little better he'd know that the position of township trustee commissioner, which he so sarcastically inquired about, has been eliminated by the state legislature and turned over to his Democratic cohorts at the County. So, he should ask them, not us, whose trustees they're inspecting. If the County acts with its usual "efficiency" it will be no one's and there will be many complaints this summer from those who suffer because weeds have not been eliminated.

Mr. Rose doesn't want to take any blame for the so-called "independent" township slate. Can't blame him for that! But, let's look at the facts! The Herald, Jan. 22 — "Rose... giving the group... financial and moral support...". The Democratic committeeman, and hence the party, has endorsed them. Their slate repeats the Democratic Party's position on township government. If it looks like a donkey, if it acts like a donkey, if it brays like a donkey, why shouldn't we think it is a donkey?

Certainly nothing has been presented by our opponents to make me retract my statement that their purpose for running for township office is to allow the Cook County Democrat political machine move into suburbia and that they are "fronting" for the Democrat party and are not running to serve but to destroy.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Hall, who is currently an Elk Grove Township auditor, is running for the position of township supervisor.

Wants test results

Recently the eighth grade students in the junior high schools of Dist. 25 completed the STS Educational Development Series Tests. Each student received the results of his specific test, and from this information his relative standing in the freshman class of Dist. 214 high schools can be estimated. Although this information is interesting, parents who have children in or entering junior high schools would like to see a comparison of results from all the schools feeding a specific high school.

In the past few years, teaching techniques have been changing markedly and schools within given districts use different techniques. Parents are concerned about the newer techniques being used, and it appears to me that a comparison of the average results representative of each school would provide a basis for comparison. Since teachers, principals, and administrators of Dist. 25 advise parents that the new techniques are quite good, you would think that they would be anxious to quantify their position with test results. Such is not the case! In fact they absolutely refuse to give out this information — they claim to have good reasons. Other districts do and the reluctance on the part of Dist. 25 has raised all sorts of suspicions in our minds.

I would think that as tax payers we have the right to this information, and that the school administration has an obligation to reveal it.

Pahl challenges Hall

In a front page story in the February 28 Elk Grove Herald, Richard Hall, unopposed candidate for Elk Grove Township Supervisor, stated that the independent candidates were "fronts" for the Democratic Party. I have sent the following letter to Hall which I informed him would be also sent to the Herald:

Dear Mr. Hall,

You made a mistake when you labeled my candidacy for Elk Grove Township Highway Commissioner as a "front" for the Democratic Party. I was invited to speak before the members of the Elk Grove Township Democratic Organization at their meeting of Feb. 13. I accepted, as an independent. I stressed that I was aligned with neither the Republicans nor the Democrats.

I thanked Democratic Committeeman Chester Chesney for his support, which he "wholeheartedly" gave me (without my requesting it), but I made it abundantly clear that I was not asking that organization for its support.

I stated that I would probably be working with members of the Democratic Party on a man-to-man basis, but not a party basis. The same holds true for me vis a vis the Republican Party. If I am invited to speak before them, I will say the same thing. To date, I have not been invited.

Please take notice of the error you have made in labeling me a "front" for the Democratic Party, Mr. Hall. I am a "front" for no man, woman, organization, or idea, other than my own conscience. Thank you.

Sincerely, Larry Pahl
It is unfortunate that in running against Alfred C. Steil, I now find myself at odds with Richard Hall, who is unopposed. But as long as Hall does the talking for the men on his slate, I think it best to invite him to the debate to which the contested Republicans have already been challenged. Perhaps with Hall invited, they will find it easier to accept. In the interests of this country's system of democratic government, I hope so.

Larry Pahl,
Independent candidate,
Elk Grove Township
Highway Commissioner

Thank you

Please express my grateful thanks to the Palatine Paramedics for the wonderful performance in cooperation with the Doctor and staff at the emergency section of Northwest Community Hospital on March 1.

I do not know the names of the men, but I want to thank them publicly for the wonderful job that they did for me. Also the staff in the emergency room did an excellent job and are to be commended for their performance. Both of them are very efficient in their performance and did very much to prevent a fatality.

Thanks so very much.

Tom Wellman Highway Fund's got a local pal

It's always seemed that the primary purpose of paying $20 per year to the Chicago Motor Club was to prevent a long walk when one's gas gauge read "zero."

I've dutifully sent in a check every year, but at times I wonder why. The CMC's vaunted road service quits when the temperature drops to zero, and their road maps end up stamped with "road construction" and it makes you want to stay home.

Now, however, the CMC has a pre-occupation beyond maps and tow trucks. It's now arguing loudly to protect the federal Highway Trust Fund from those persons and interests that want to use some of it for mass transit projects.

The argument against such diversion is outlined in the February issue of Motor news, the CMC monthly publication. Gerald W. Cavanaugh, president, waxes eloquent:

"Once again the motorists are being maligned by a small but vocal anti-automobile contingent as being 'insensitive' to the needs of the community and the total good."

Tom

And, "the good old dependable highway user is being asked to give up just a little of those millions and millions of so-called 'surplus Highway Trust Fund dollars so mass transit facilities in major urban centers can receive the necessary funds to improve their operations."

For goodness sakes, don't let 'em rip and tear at the Highway Trust Fund, he suggests. Current roads and maintenance programs are already inadequate to meet motorists' needs; we must protect what we already have.

In conclusion, Cavanaugh says the CMC (and by inference its parent organization, the American Automobile Assn.) does not regard mass transit as an evil, but that funding for it should not come from the Trust Fund. He states the CMC's position is based on a poll taken of CMC members.

The first problem, in dealing rationally with the CMC's position, is to clear the air of the vehemence towards Trust Fund critics. There's the feeling that to be against certain aspects of the Trust Fund is indeed, to be un-American.

In part, the CMC's position makes sense, from a pragmatic point of view. Its livelihood depends on auto transportation, which is perhaps why you don't see mass transit marked on its highway maps. There's no reason why the CMC should thus support mass transit.

Second, there are several reasons why roads are inadequate and poorly maintained today. The foremost reason is that too many cars use them, and part of that reason for the overload is the lack of a modern, convenient and comprehensive mass transportation system.

I'm not suggesting all cars should be junked. Rather, what's needed is an integrated system of private and public transportation. The Highway Trust Fund could contribute to such a modernization. The common good, as roads grow more crowded, is the development of such mass transit.

Indeed, the CMC's opposition to diverting funds — and emphasis on autos — represents more cars, more overloaded roads and a higher tax bill for road work. An integrated and effective mass transit system could ease that escalation of cost in the future.

With Detroit's four-wheeled wonders, there's always going to be a need for tow trucks and road maps, and that's where the CMC and the AAA should work.

(A final thought: If the CMC is REALLY interested in mass transit, it should staunchly back the auto-train experiments which have been successful between Washington, D.C., and Florida. How about it, CMC?)

by JAMES O. CLIFFORD
MENLO PARK, Calif. (UPI) — Bank executives know why regular customers use their facilities, but a security expert says they're puzzled about the fellow who makes the unsolicited withdrawal: the holdup man.

Very little has been done to learn why a holdup man "hits" a particular bank while avoiding another, says Willard D. Tiffany of the Stanford Research Institute.

Tiffany and associates at the institute have done a preliminary study in this field, but he stressed "preliminary."

"Unfortunately, the follow-up phase of the earlier research was not opted by the client," he said.

THE STUDY did suggest some interesting theories.

"Banks with a high rotunda, with people moving about over the tellers' cages, hardly ever seemed to be held up," he said.

The study also showed what Tiffany called the "rational holdup man" favored banks with two doors.

"One door did not provide enough escape routes and any more than two gave too much exposure."

SOME POLICE experts think the modern low silhouette bank counter line is responsible for the rise in holdups. Not so, showed the study.

"On the contrary, it almost appears that the older wickets, high barriers and translucent glass are more favored by holdup men," Tiffany said.

The SRI team, he said, found a pattern of poor lighting, screened and shaded windows, and comparative dinginess in older branches that suffered holdups more or less regularly.

A BANK official did not go along with this and showed the team a modern, well-lit branch that had also been hit regularly in preceding years.

Tiffany said the team learned, however, a fence had been put around the parking lot about a year ago at that up-to-date branch and since then there had not been a robbery. The fence, he said, blocked "what had been multiple escape avenues leading to adjacent streets."

How many family 'cars' are trucks?

Nearly one-third of the private and commercial trucks registered in Illinois in 1972 were used mainly for personal transportation, in place of automobiles. This is reported by the Bureau of the Census, part of the U.S. Department of Commerce's Social and Economic Statistics Administration.

Preliminary estimates resulting from the Truck Inventory and Use Survey, part of the 1972 Census of Transportation, show that about 214,000 trucks — 31 per cent of the estimated 695,000 registered in Illinois — were driven almost 2 billion miles to and from work and school, on shopping trips, camping and vacation trips, etc., in 1972. The survey report released recently by the Census Bureau shows nearly 8 billion truck miles driven by trucks registered in the state in 1972.

Agriculture was the second most frequently reported use for trucks in the state, accounting for about 31 per cent of the trucks registered. Wholesale and retail trades and utilities and services each accounted for 11 per cent of the total.

Wall Street chatter

NEW YORK (UPI) — Individual investors "continue to be apathetic toward stocks," Blyth, Eastman, Dillon observes. The public's back will be turned toward the market until we see a broad advance, until mutual funds exceed general market and until commission surcharges are done away with. The firm believes this marked shift from the prevailing emotions of the '60s "greed and fear" to the apathy of the '70s "has major implications for P-E ratios and market liquidity."

A SLIP IN dollar-exchange rates could bring on a flurry of foreign buying in U.S. stock markets, Laidlaw & Co. says. It would fill the void the lack of public speculation has created, and might even revive the individual investor's interest. "All these recent crises have unleashed new, extremely dynamic speculative forces" that could eventually send stock prices soaring, the company says.

THE DOW 30 level is probably a solid base line, and the 12.4 multiple, the lowest in 10 years could be "a bulwark against any important sell-off at this juncture," the Spear Market Report believes. If the politicians can bring about some peace in the currency markets, the list could take a sharp upswing. "If not, the possibility of another sell-off, terminated with a selling climax, should not be ruled out," the letter said.

REAL GROWTH of the economy, which takes into account a deflator, "will slow progressively through 1973 and 1974," Legg-Mason predicts. From a purely economic standpoint, this could be a positive development, but from the list's point of view, "it is difficult to justify higher price-earnings multiples in an environment where the rate of growth of corporate profits may be declining," the company adds.

Cost factor determining method may be changed

ICC seeking end to rate hike 'tool'

by LEA TONKIN

The Illinois Commerce Commission wants to scrap one of the most reliable tools used by public utilities to gain service rate increases, an action that could jeopardize current rate hike requests by Illinois Bell Telephone Co. and other utilities.

Billed as a cost-cutting measure by the commission, the change involves the determination of the cost factor used in determining a fair rate of return for a utility. Instead of the often used "reproduction cost figure" — an estimate of what it would cost to replace building and equipment at current prices — the ICC wants to consider the "original cost" factor. This is the amount of money it cost for buildings and equipment at the time they were built or purchased.

THE COST savings, in the ICC's estimation, would come with the elimination of reproduction cost studies, "some of which cost in excess of $1 million to make, and which the rate payers must pay," the commission said. The ICC contends the studies are "duplicative, unwarrantedly inflate the rate base and as a result exact from the rate payer higher rates than they should be made to pay."

This turnabout could cause quite a flap among public utility financial experts. A number of utility spokesmen indicated last week the policy change will make it tougher to get the kind of rate increases they have in mind.

One company official likened the ICC "original cost" policy to basing the present market value of a 20-year old house on what it originally cost to build.

ILLINOIS BELL Telephone Co., now seeking a general rate increase before the commission as well as permission to raise rates for certain specialized users, is among the first to criticize the ICC move. The utility wants an added $20.8 million a year for selective rate increases on special services, as well as $62 million a year in a general service rate hike. Hearings on this request continued in Chicago through last Friday.

"The ICC's decision to discard the fair market value method of determining rate of return is in conflict with numerous decisions of the Illinois Supreme Court," said an Illinois Supreme Court spokesman on Friday. "During the 20 years since the Illinois Supreme Court ruled that Illinois Bell's rate of return should be determined on a fair market value basis, the increasing impact of inflation has given the fair value concept even greater validity."

Undaunted by the ICC's new policy, Illinois Bell representatives will continue to truck out evidence supporting the hoped-for rate boost, based on fair market value statistics. "We know we have sound case and we're certain the commission will continue to consider our needs carefully," said the utility spokesman, adding that good earnings are needed to provide good service.

The ICC first used the original cost value in weighing a rate increase request from Central Illinois Public Service Co. The ICC last Wednesday granted a $14.5 million rate hike to the utility, 40 per cent less than the amount it sought.

Personal Finance

by CARLTON SMITH

It is a sad fact, privately admitted by most first-rate dentists, that in hundreds of offices across the country there are dentists who are a disgrace to their profession, and a tragedy for their patients (or victims).

In the past several years the practice of dentistry has been virtually revolutionized. Radically new equipment and instruments, a great increase in scientific knowledge and understanding, and the teaching of few procedures make it possible today to save all but a small percentage of the teeth that would have been routinely extracted not too many years ago.

But not all dentists, by any means, practice that kind of dentistry.

"There are 118,175 dentists in the United States — and based on available evidence, it can be conservatively estimated that at least 15 per cent are incompetent, dishonest or both. Some have set the figure as high as 50 per cent," says "A Shopper's Guide to Dentistry," just issued by the office of Herbert S. Denenberg, Pennsylvania Insurance Commissioner.

DENENBERG, who's attracted wide attention with a series of shopper's guides on various types of insurance, and health care problems, views "the incompetent and dishonest" as "a comparatively small minority." The patient's problem, he says, is knowing whether he's in the hands of a member of that minority.

For, he complains, the profession itself isn't of much help in this respect. "Dentists are sworn to be kind to each other, not to the patient." A section of the principles of ethics of the American Dental Association, quoted, prohibits members from "referring disparagingly . . . to the services of another dentist, to a member of the public."

But if another dentist won't tell you who the bad ones are, will he give you the names of some good ones? Yes — if you ask the right dentist.

THE PENNSYLVANIA guide proposed "32 rules for selecting a dentist and obtaining good dental care" — too many to summarize here. But No. 1, telling you how to find a first-rate dentist, is by itself worth its weight in gold fillings.

Select someone who's on the faculty of a university's school of dentistry. Or ask him to recommend someone. "Those associated with dental schools are among the best dentists, and they usually know other top-notch practitioners."

Ask a specialist for the name of a first-rate general practitioner. Dentistry's three main specialties are the orthodontist (he straightens), the periodontist (gum diseases), and the endodontist (root canal work). Make sure, in each case, that he's "board certified."

ALL THESE specialists are prevention-oriented, and pay attention to which patients, referred to them by which general dentists, are getting good preventive care. Further, they need sound, well-cared-for teeth to work on, or they don't look very good at their specialties. So generally they work with, and get their patients from, the better general-practice or family dentists.

You'd doubtless find the remainder of the 32 rules instructive and profitable, but the Pennsylvania department has found it has to restrict distribution of its guides to residents of the state. Don't bother to write.

However, if you have a cousin who lives there, or know somebody in a company branch office there, don't tell Commissioner Denenberg we said so, but it's worth trying a sneak play around left end to get a copy.

Flower-car controversy wilts into compliance

A dispute between flower-car drivers and area funeral directors which blossomed into a well-publicized showdown at the cemetery gates, faded as compliance with a new contract agreement was enforced.

This was the report of a spokesman for Teamsters Local 727, representing some 600 Chicago area flower car drivers. Under a new contract between the union and the Funeral Directors Services Association bargaining group, effective March 1, no more than one bunch of flowers could be carried to a cemetery in a funeral procession, unless a flower car is hired. Enforcement began last Thursday.

The one-bunch provision was enforced, as of March 15, according to James C. Coli Sr., secretary-treasurer of Local 727. Union members were posted at cemetery gates to ensure compliance, he said. No incidents were reported as the enforcement program began. Violations could bring fines for the drivers and the threat of a strike against a funeral director.

COLI SAID FUNERAL directors had abused the flower-carrying practice by stuffing dozens of floral arrangements in a limousine trunk for transportation to a cemetery. "You look like a bunch of gypsies going down the street," he said of this practice. In addition, flower car drivers were losing jobs as a result of this abuse, he said.

"Now that doesn't mean we're gonna force everybody to take flowers to the cemetery," Coli said. "If they don't want to take flowers, we don't care. But if they do, then they gotta take a flower car."

According to Herbert Wolfe, executive director of the Allied Florist Association, the new agreement is not affecting florists' business. "It's been blown out of proportion," he said. "Most funerals have 20 arrangements, and the funeral director hires a flower car. People are not inclined to take too many flowers to the cemetery anyway."

As reported earlier in the Herald, several area ministers and funeral directors noted the added financial burden the regulation could impose on bereaved families. The average cost for flower car services is $64.50, varying according to mileage.

Does your homeowners insurance policy include coverage for a situation like this?

Almost certainly it doesn't—unless you own a Country Mutual Homeowners Plan that includes protection against flood damage.

Country Mutual is the only company in the state that offers you the chance to include flood coverage as an integral part of your homeowners policy.

Many—not all, but many—homeowners who were hard hit in the heavy rains of last August and September can qualify for flood protection from Country Mutual—one of the three largest property insurers in Illinois.

Flood damage, of course, is only one of the perils homeowners face. Country Mutual's choice of four plans—from Basic to All-Physical Loss—lets you choose from many coverages.

But suppose you don't want flood coverage? Then consider this: Country Mutual's most popular policy—the Broad Form—offers most qualified people savings of up to 20%.

Select your own liability limits, too. And there's a variety of deductible options for extra premium savings.

This much is sure: It'll cost you only a postage stamp to check Country Mutual before you buy or renew homeowners insurance. Clip and mail the coupon now.

Lifestyle begets hang-ups in women

by MONICA WILCH

(First of three parts)

Marianne was 28, the mother of three children under 10, and unhappy.

She didn't like being a housewife, and lately there had been marital troubles as well. A lot of little things began building up inside her. She was angry, but she didn't show it. Marianne became very depressed.

The attractive brunette began to lose her appetite, had trouble sleeping. She lost interest in her family and friends, withdrew into herself. She didn't care about anything anymore. What was the use?

One night she and her husband quarreled, and he left the house. Marianne thought to herself, "They would all be better off without me, and so would I."

She went upstairs, kissed each of her sleeping sons goodnight, wrote a note to her husband, then swallowed a handful of sleeping pills.

Marianne was lucky. She was found by her husband and rushed to Lutheran General Hospital in Park Ridge, where emergency treatment saved her life — and subsequent psychiatric care made it worth living.

SUICIDE HAS historically been higher among men, but women attempt it more often. However, in a recent two-month period, there were eight suicides reported in the northwest suburbs, half of which were women. This does not count suicides recorded as accidents, nor does it account for suicide attempts.

While suicide statistics are sometimes misleading, due to the varying dependability of reporting techniques and society's mania to cover up these tragedies, some experts believe that our culture is producing a generation of severely depressed women, and some go so far as to predict that the female suicide rate is headed toward an increase.

Thoreau once wrote that the mass of people "lead lives of quiet desperation." Such is the picture that is painted of the masses of middle-class American women populating modern suburbia.

"Our suburban lifestyle is unique in cultural history in terms of isolation," claims sociologist Pauline Bart of the University of Illinois Circle Campus. "Women are expected to stay alone all day with the kids, and they feel trapped," she said.

Dr. Bart pointed to studies by a Harvard anthropologist establishing that women in other cultures have not been totally dependent creatures, but were producers. They helped plant and harvest food, for example.

WOMEN IN OTHER times and cultures also were surrounded by other adults — grandparents, aunts, uncles, as well as both male and female members of the community who worked close to where they lived.

"Suburban existence is an abnormal state," Dr. Bart maintains.

Adding to the suburban housewife's isolation, according to Dr. Bart, is the lack of mass transportation into urban areas and the lack of social institutions such as day care centers, to facilitate women working and expanding their roles.

The director of the Northwest Mental Health Center in Arlington Heights, Dr. Eugene Trager, also suspects that "a significant percentage of their (the women treated at the center) problems are related to factors of suburban life." He ticked off distance, again, as potentially a major factor.

"What would be the incidence of depression in housewives whose husbands work close compared to those whose husbands commute?" he asked. "I think the commuter's wife suffers."

Added to that, Dr. Trager said, is the undeveloped sense of community, the mobility and rootlessness of suburbanites. "People need to feel this is their community, their life." He speculated that "if it was respectable and safe to stay in the old neighborhoods in the city, people would."

BOTH EXPERTS expressed concern that mobility affects wives much more than husbands.

"If a family moves," Dr. Trager pointed out, "the husband is rooted at work, but the wife is disrupted."

After a move, the wife "must reconstruct her identity," Dr. Bart said, explaining that while the husband is probably with the same company, where he is known and possibly has been promoted, no one in the new neighborhood knows the wife or her past accomplishments.

In her own clinical studies Dr. Bart found that depressed women were likely to have moved recently.

Another characteristic of suburbia which is often associated in various ways to the deterioration of mental well-being is materialism.

"Possessions are symbolic of your worth" in society today, Dr. Bart said. "But in the Northwest suburbs, I believe that many of the women are suffering meta-depression — they know they have all these material things and it doesn't make any different; then they feel guilty about being depressed."

THE MATERIAL hang-up is echoed time and again by the women who seek counseling from Mrs. Bobbie McKay, who is employed by a suburban church to work particularly with the women of the community.

Mrs. McKay, who holds degrees in psychology and theology, said women frequently come to her wondering why they feel unhappy when they have all the things they want and are providing everything their children want.

"Why isn't it making things better?" they ask.

"This is a terrible disappointment for them," Mrs. McKay said.

"The elements for a sense of failure and guilt are abundant in the suburbs — from sex life, to the children, to the husband's job," as well as the "oughts" — things the suburban woman is told she "should" do.

One factor contributing to this situation, and also distinguishing modern suburbia from other forms of community, is the lack of shared responsibilities, Mrs. McKay said. The husbands go one way, the children another and the wives in a third direction — "but mother gets blamed when anything goes wrong."

"Mothers in the suburbs also take a great deal of responsibility for the children, instead of letting them develop their own responsibility — which is bad for both the children and the mother."

STUDIES CONDUCTED by Dr. Bart in the Los Angeles area also corroborated the detrimental effects of the role played by suburban housewives. The study was based on interviews and records of middle-aged suburban women who were in mental hospitals because of depression.

The women were married, never divorced, never had had a career, were middle class and had several children — at least one grown. All had had over-protective relationships with their children.

"They had been super-mothers and super-wives," said Dr. Bart, "but now they had no meaning in their lives because their families no longer needed them."

"I call it existential depression," Dr. Bart said. And so does Dr. Leo Jacobs, psychiatrist at Forest Hospital in Des Plaines.

"Meaninglessness," or existential depression, is a common thing among suburban women in their late 30s and early 40s, according to Dr. Jacobs, who believes that these women "must come to terms with themselves" — and with their unrealized dreams. "They must either be generative or stagnate."

UNREALIZED DREAMS — or blocked aspirations — can be a particular problem for the educated woman. If her career is terminated by marriage, she may become emotionally or mentally disturbed.

"The more women have given up to get married, the more depressed they will become," said Esther Cornell, psychologist at Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge.

"Women are also taught not to express anger, although for men it is OK," Dr. Bart said. "We're trained not to wear our hearts on our sleeves. That's good manners, but bad mental health," she said, adding that "suicide is anger expressed against self."

Dr. Bart said this explains in part why some suicides come as such a surprise to friends and family — the person did not let on that he or she was unhappy, but bottled it up.

On the other hand, a suicide attempt is generally considered the most desperate act of trying to communicate unhappiness, and yet, Dr. Bart charged, it is often shrugged off as a "gesture" and "made meaningless."

"Psychiatry has been abysmally ignorant of women," she said. "If this is the only way a woman can get help, she's really in an impossible situation. It's a powerless feeling. If you feel you can do something about your life and that your depression is temporary, you won't kill yourself."

DR. TRAGER, however, believes that there is a valid distinction between suicide "gestures" and suicide attempts. The "gesture," he said, is aimed at improving one's life, while the suicide attempt is aimed at ending life.

"We see a lot of the first kind. It's usually a desperate means to involve the husband, to let him know that she can't be taken for granted, to get help. The gesture is characteristically committed in a situation in which rescue is assured."

Those who do this, Dr. Trager said, "tend to be women who are not necessarily so emotionally disturbed as oppressed by a dominating situation; they must do something dramatic to get notice."

"LITTLE BOXES made of ticky-tacky" stretch on for mile after uninterrupted mile in modern suburbia. Inside a majority of them is a housewife, alone with her children, isolated from most of adult society and the hustle and bustle of the world.

Fashion by Genie

The wide range of looks and combinations continually growing out of the men's fashion explosion (the most recent innovation being pastels for men) prompts a need for discrimination and judgment on the part of all fashion-conscious males.

Not every man is going to jump at the opportunity to wear a pink unconstructed suit. But those who do prefer to bypass the pastels can remain in style with bold plaids, seersucker, madras and classics in off-white.

The men's apparel firm, Arrow, has attempted to aid the man in making his spring and summer wardrobe decisions by offering a new collection of Color Key Coordinates. Dyed together, sold together, worn together is the way Arrow puts it.

A STORE DISPLAY using special color-keyed hangers and dividers makes it simple for the customer to do his own coordinating.

Included in this group are double-knit slacks in clear solids, pinstriped seersucker and mini checks; knit shirts in fashionable stripes and prints; sweaters and lightweight jackets in coordinating tones.

Arrow offers a choice of three major color categories — red, navy and white; blue, yellow and white; brown, gold and white.

In the sportswear Arrow is featuring coordinated gear for golfers, tennis players, boating buffs and hiking enthusiasts. Are you ready for the names of the individual collections?

HERE GOES . . . in order, they're teestuff, netstuff, deckstuff and spokestuff. But I don't suppose Arrow would complain if you bought teestuff to wear in the galley of your boat or put on deck-stuff to take your bicycle out for a spin.

In shirts, the line for which Arrow is most recognized by the individual consumer, the firm is adding more button-downs to its collection of dress shirts and lots of textured checks and plaids offset with white colors and worn with solid ties. Coordinates is now as necessary a word in the fashion vocabulary of the man as for the woman. It is becoming exceedingly important for men to learn how to add up all the individual looks to arrive at a total fashion picture. And then they, too, voice the same complaint . . . it's not the limited choice but rather too much to pick from.

Major importers of sportswear and knitted apparel are still deciding whether to absorb price hikes resulting from the recent devaluation of the dollar or pass it along to the stores.

Many importers who are waiting further developments believe the Nixon administration will impose a surtax on imports.

ONE SOLUTION to the dilemma without hitting the consumer might be to split higher costs between the importer and the store. It's a little easier on everyone that way.

Suburban Living ESPECIALLY FOR THE FAMILY

THE GULF BETWEEN the suburbs and the city, both in terms of distance and orientation, has contributed to the housewife's isolation, many experts believe. When her husband catches the train in the morning, he is bound for a different world, one in which she has no part.

ARTIST KENT BURGESS does final soldering on a metal sculpture to be sold at the Kirk Center CRAFTeria Saturday 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. More than eighty artists will appear at the craft fair to benefit mentally handicapped children at Kirk, 520 S. Plum Grove Road, Palatine.

The Home Line

by Dorothy Ritz

Dear Dorothy: Am I rich? That's part joke. Just after the holidays, I heard a broadcast saying that if anyone had the holiday stamp of Santa Claus holding a trumpet in the air — and with another arm alongside it — to hang on to it because it was valuable. We found one and have treated it like a family treasure. Reading your piece about stamp collecting made me think you might know something about this misprinted stamp. Have we really got something valuable? —Jeanne Mayer

Maybe yes, maybe no. One of the top stamp experts reports that it was caused by a maladjustment on the press, but thinks the value has been ballooned way out of proportion by the accounts given. He says that if it turns out eventually that there is a shortage of this particular misprinted portion, then someday it might be valuable. Just in case, keep it. Check again five years hence.

Dear Dorothy: I bought some frozen

French toast and warmed it in the toaster as the instructions said. However, it wasn't as soft and delicate as I like French toast to be — and thought it was just one of the "dumb" purchases. Then, remembering how we "freshen" up frozen rolls and such in our handy little steamer, thought I'd try it. It was perfect, almost as if just freshly made. —Mabel Cook

Dear Dorothy: This hint, given me by a rugmaker, may be of help to someone in despair over a cigarette burn in his carpeting. If one has a remnant of the carpet, snip off a little of the pile, put white glue on the cigarette burn, wad up the little bits of pile and press onto the glue. If there is no remnant, take a piece from an out-of-the-way place on the carpet. Do not vacuum until the spot is completely dry. Fantastic! —G. M. Rodby

(Mrs. Ritz welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to her in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.)

Guild to 'toss' a salad luncheon

It's nearly salad bowl time for the Women's Guild of Prospect Heights Community Church. Members are already going through their recipe files for unusual and tasty salads which they will be bringing to the annual salad luncheon Wednesday, March 28.

The table will be set in the church hall, Route 63 and Willow Road, and the buffet line forms at noon.

There will also be an afternoon program presented by Judy Cherney on "Decorating with Antiques and Junique." Reservations can now be made with Mrs. J. Sheerer, 253-9005, at $1.50 each. Guests are invited.

Havdalah service

The Sisterhood of Congregation B'nai Jehoshua Beth Elohim will sponsor a Havdalah service in the youth lounge at 901 Milwaukee Ave., Glenview, Saturday from 4:30 to 7 p.m.

Havdalah is the ceremony that marks the end of the Sabbath and the beginning of the new week. The program will feature folk singers Marvin Binstock and Jane Waller who will sing and lead Israeli songs.

A potluck dinner will be served. Those planning to attend may contact Rhea Janofsky, 729-5286, or Zena Wagner, 772-7949, concerning their contributions to the meal.

Suburbia's got the blues

movement "Isn't presenting a complete picture" and thus is generating more negative and guilt feelings for women "who feel they don't fit here, either."

Dr. Jacobs fears that "as society evolves to give women a more equal position, she'll be more vulnerable to suicide" for the same reasons that men have been. There is less suicide, Dr. Jacobs pointed out, among people in lesser social positions, but persons in responsible positions "cannot be spontaneous, and may have extreme difficulty communicating their dependency needs." Traditionally a male hang-up, this may now be shared by women.

But Dr. Bart believes that the women's movement "is making it easier for women to talk to each other." She counters the argument that it causes guilt feelings by asserting that "you can't stir people up if it's not there to begin with. Before, housewives just blamed these feelings on themselves."

"THIS DISCONTENT they might feel now is not suicidal — a revolution means hope, that things don't have to be this way."

Ultimately, however, every woman has to take responsibility for her own development, believes Dr. Cornell.

"Will it ever get any better?" the women ask Mrs. McKay.

And she tells them, "The answer lies within you."

Because, as Thomas Wolfe's character Ben Gant served, "You are your world."

Tomorrow: The Anatomy of Depression.

Here's one not for the birds

Friday, just as Alice Flaxton, my best friend and next door neighbor, was preparing to leave my house after having coffee, our dog started barking wildly and throwing herself against the back door.

Alice seemed somewhat alarmed by the dog's behavior, but I assured her that the dog was flaky from needing a long walk.

Alice offered to take her on one, but I declined because it wasn't the kind of walk I had in mind. Then, as she opened the door, the dog charged past her and raced madly around the screen porch, chasing a bird that had got trapped inside.

"Close the door!" Alice shouted, "before it gets in the house!"

I did as she ordered.

Alice tapped on the glass. "All right. Now come out and help me free this poor thing."

Now, I have this hang-up about anything flying around my head. I'm sure it comes from my growing up in a house that was a winter haven for bats. That's another story, but as a result I have a fear that any flying thing smaller than a Piper Cub is likely to get caught in my hair.

I tried to explain this to Alice, but she wouldn't listen. "First get the dog out of here, then hold that porch door open."

Retrieving the animal that kept protesting she was born to hunt, I did as Alice said.

Alice stationed her self at the other porch door and told me to follow her example and sit down.

The bird, obviously relieved by the departure of the dog, flew from screen to screen, perching occasionally on a sill or on the back of a porch chair I never got around to putting away for the winter. It actually seemed to be enjoying itself.

"What do we do now?" I asked Alice.

"Wait," she said flatly.

I began to tell her some neighborhood news that had slipped my mind earlier.

"Shh!" Alice hissed. "You'll scare the bird."

"Me? Frighten that eagle in there?" I began to laugh, probably a little hysterically.

Oh, for heaven's sake, it's only a sparrow. Alice was getting annoyed by the quality of my cooperation.

"Well, it's the first sparrow I've ever seen with six-foot wingspread," I pouted.

Alice was not amused and threatened to leave me alone with the bird if I didn't be quiet. So we sat and held our doors.

Finally, after a long wait, the bird found its way out Alice's door.

As Alice was leaving amid my profuse thanks, I grew very thoughtful. "You know, these are the kinds of things that make it hard to explain to your husband what you did all day."

"Or," Alice added wearily, "how you got so tired doing it."

Loralee Luby is Chicagoan's bride

A red and white setting appropriate to Valentine's Day was chosen by Lorelee M Luby for her Feb. 17 wedding. She and Charles F. Bubert of Chicago exchanged vows and rings in late afternoon by candlelight in Trinity Lutheran Church, Des Plaines.

Loralee, daughter of Mrs. Anne Luby of Mount Prospect and John Luby of Bensenville, was attended by her sister and two friends who were all gowned alike in red velvet and carried white fur muffs accented by a cluster of red roses and white baby's breath.

Loralee's gown was white sateen, floor-length with a chapel train and enhanced by appliques of Venice lace at the high neck and on the long sleeves. A wide ruffle edged the hem of the gown.

A FINGERTIP veil edged in lace and held by a lace cap completed the bridal attire. Lorelee carried a bouquet of phloxes, stephanotis and baby's breath.

Her sister, Mrs. Bonnie Browne of Arlington Heights, was matron of honor. Her red velvet gown had a wide ruffle at the hemline, a halter bodice, and was topped by a bolero jacket with long sleeves.

The two bridesmaids, also wearing the red velvet were Mrs. Gloria Ewert, Hanover Park, and Mrs. Judy Cerny, Schaumburg.

Coming down the church aisle as flower girl was the bride's niece, Erin Browne, who wore a red velvet skirt, ruffled at the hem, with a red and white dotted swiss top and carried a white lace basket filled with red rose petals.

The groom, son of the Frederick Buberts of Chicago, was attended by Dan Cerny as best man, with Terry Wagner, Chicago, and Mike Maehl, Chicago Heights, as ushers.

AFTER THE ceremony there was a dinner and dancing for 180 guests at the Camelot Restaurant in Des Plaines.

Loralee and her husband have purchased a townhouse in Hanover Park where they are now settled. She works for Travel House, Inc. in Barrington and he is at Great Lakes Mortgage Corp., Chicago.

Charles is also attending John Marshall Law School since earning a master's degree from the University of Chicago. Previous to that he earned a bachelor's from Illinois Institute of Technology.

Loralee graduated from Prospect High School and attended Texas Christian University in Fort Worth. She is also an stewardess of Pan American Airlines.

'Eye in the sky' hunts poachers

Look up, poacher. Look up and scan the sky. There's an "eye" up there looking for you to end your night hunting.

The new "eye in the sky" is an airplane. Inside, conservation officers patrol the sky on various nights looking for you and your fellow violators.

The aerial patrol for night poachers began a few months ago to curb illegal taking of game animals, particularly deer, and it already has resulted in the arrests of a number of illegal hunters. One week-end alone accounted for nine arrests, and other violators have more than likely postponed an evening in the woods as the word gets around.

Poaching penalties are increasing, and an illegal deer kill can result in a large fine for the poacher and loss of his vehicle and gun.

Although Illinois has 108 conservation law enforcement officers to patrol 102 counties, this still leaves each man with more than 400 square miles of territory to cover. An officer using an auto may be watching one area for poachers at night, only to have violators active a few miles away. He is fortunate to be at the correct location and able to catch an illegal hunter jack-lighting or shining deer before the poacher detects his presence and escapes.

"POACHING, jack-lighting, night-lighting, or any other name you wish to call it, implies the same thing," said William D. Miller, chief of the Division of Law Enforcement of the Department of Conservation. "It is the illegal taking of game at night, usually for profit through sale of deer meat. The method most used in Illinois is by shining a spotlight from an auto on the animal which holds him spellbound. He stands still with the light in his eyes, and the poacher then shoots him."

Realizing that poachers take advantage of the department's routine patrolling, Miller assigned one of his assistants, Donald Hastings to consider a program of aerial detection.

Contacting other law agencies, Hastings found that aerial surveillance programs have been highly successful in detecting and arresting poachers in other states. Using some of their experience, a new program was implemented in October last year.

WITH SUPERVISORS Orville Lansford and Duane Heady assisting in the operation, the program was successful initially, when three would-be deer poachers were apprehended the first evening. It has continued to prove itself as an effective tool in stopping illegal hunting.

It has also proven to be highly effective in other areas. During the pheasant season, it was utilized in the daytime to apprehend persons hunting illegally off highways in rural areas. One arrest was made of a group of hunters, who used a four-wheel vehicle to criss-cross a stubblefield, flush pheasants and shoot them from the moving vehicle.

During the deer hunting season the plane was used to cover the vast areas of Shawnee National Forest to locate secluded deer hunting camps. These inaccessible camps are often sources of illegal or over-the-limit deer kills.

A typical night of surveillance begins at sunset. The pilot takes off from Capital Airport in Springfield, and sets a westward course toward the Illinois River valley, the area officers plan to check on this particular evening. The conservation officer in the front seat releases an antenna cord from the ceiling of the cockpit and hooks up the two way radio. Plugging one earphone into his ear and plugging the microphone on his lapel, he passes the second earphone to the officer in the rear seat.

LIGHTS FROM towns below brighten the landscape and strings of auto headlights snake through the night forming the patterns of the roads. It will be a good night for aerial surveillance as a full moon brightens the earth below. Soon the Illinois River is visible. The officer speaks into the microphone.

Four thousand feet below, a light green patrol car is sitting off the roadside with lights out, hidden from passing traffic. Inside, one of the conservation officers picks up the microphone, looks above for the plane and upon spotting it, radios his position and flicks his headlights. The process is repeated with four other waiting vehicles scattered about below — and then, for the 10 men working in the patrol cars, the long wait begins.

The pilot slows the speed of the plane as its occupants seek unusual lights on the ground. Time passes and each light below is watched for a moment by the officers and then passed on. Farm pole lights appear with a greenish cast, other lights with an amber glow, and headlights from moving vehicles appear as shafts of moving light. Tow boats and barges throw searchlight beams onto the banks, and the river sparkles.

Small towns are identified by clusters of light. They help the pilot and officers to know their exact position.

Suddenly, a set of auto headlights are seen in what appears to be a blank area. Locking his eyes to it, the officer follows its progress, notes that it is traveling very slow and the bright red flare of brake lights appears with unusual frequency. The plane slowly circles so the lights remain in sight. The brake lights come on again and the vehicle stops. Foliage on the right side of the vehicle suddenly reflects the glare of a spotlight.

WHILE ONE officer keeps his eyes on the auto, the other gains location data from the plane instruments and relays it via radio to the waiting patrol cars.

Below, the light green auto confirms the radio reading and moves out onto the road. In the back seat, an officer computes the ground location of the suspect car from the aerial data he has received. He relays the location information to the other waiting patrol cars.

In the other cars scattered around the area, maps are hurriedly read and the location is checked against their own location. A car parked in a grove of trees notes it is five miles west of him and begins to move. In another car, an officer picks up the microphone and asks the direction of travel. Noting that he is 10 miles south and finding that the suspect's direction of travel is southerly, he moves out toward an intersecting road.

The plane begins to climb a little and fly in a large slow circle over the area.

Off to the side, the airplane spotters note another set of headlights entering the area on an intersecting road. The plane quickly calls the patrol cars and asks for a flashing of lights for identification. The auto lights below remain unchanged and continue toward the suspect vehicle. The innocent citizen in the second auto makes a right turn onto the same road as the suspect, and follows his direction. Speeding up, the suspect vehicle begins to move out, apparently worried that the oncoming lights might be that of an officer.

UP IN THE PLANE the officers follow the two sets of headlights carefully. At the bottom of a hill the suspect turns into a field road and extinguishes his lights. The plane carefully notes the location. The citizen's vehicle continues up the road toward the hiding place and passes by the suspect vehicle.

Then another set of headlights come into view and the plane radios for recognition. The headlights blink, and with relief, the officers in the plane note that only a few miles separate the officers and the suspect's position.

In the field road, the suspect, realizing that the other auto was not looking for him, edges out into the road in the opposite direction. Noting that it is now moving toward the approaching patrol car, the plane advises the officers and they pull over to the side of the road.

As the suspect's headlights appear around the curve, they are greeted by flashing red lights. The suspect makes a futile attempt to go around, but finds his way blocked by the patrol car.

The vehicle stops and the two officers step from their auto and approach the car from opposite directions. Inside sit two men, and between them the barrel of a rifle is plainly visible. After identifying themselves as conservation officers, they request the men to get out and then conduct a search for other weapons. One officer escorts the men around in front of the car headlights. The other obtains the rifle, ejects the bullets.

He locates a large hand spotlight with a cigarette lighter plug, and in the rear seat, he finds a cardboard box in which there are two large butcher knives and several white cloths and a sheet of plastic.

ADVISING THEM of their rights, the would-be poachers are placed under arrest and with the rifle and spotlight as evidence, the poachers are taken to the county jail where they are booked.

The description of the rifle and serial numbers are noted and the officer radios to State Police headquarters and requests a routine inquiry. If the firearm owner registration is questionable, this information is forwarded to the sheriff, and the poachers will have additional problems confronting them.

The patrol car then returns to its former position. The plane is radioed and advised that it is again ready, if needed, and the wait begins once more.

This is typical of many arrests made of poachers since the program was inaugurated.

Some nights prove fruitless, and long hours are worked with no results, but the program still serves a purpose. It prepares the men working the detail for the next occasion when perhaps a poacher will be located, it keeps the area clear of illegal hunters who are now aware that the program is in effect, and it affords safety for the game animals.

"We know that our radio is being monitored in some areas by a few of the jacklighters," said Hastings. "We try to beat this by using codes which are unfamiliar to the listeners. We have broken the state down into section numbers which are not familiar to them, and we use no town or officer's names when broadcasting."

SINCE ITS INCEPTION, this program has been responsible for stopping the illegal slaughter of scores of deer and other Illinois game animals. Though the program is still in its infant stages, it has proven to be economical since it utilizes the department airplane at times when it is free of other chores such as forest fire patrol, game censuses and other uses. It utilizes regular county enforcement officers and equipment, and the aeronautical equipment used in locating violators is a conventional type already needed in the plane for regular navigation. Even the radio is a regular two way used in routine enforcement.

"We have been very happy with the initial success of the program," Miller concluded. "The violators we are apprehending are offending true sportsmen and in effect, robbing them. Illinois sportsmen interested in the welfare of game welcome this 'eye in the sky' to protect the state's wildlife."

HERE'S THE EASY range view a jack-lighting poacher has of a deer at night, held transfixed and motionless by his spotlight. It's easy to see how illegal night deer hunting can be done with a minimum of time and effort.

Blind 'explorers' visit wilderness on 'braille trails'

by SAM FOGG

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There is a new breed of sightseer exploring the nation's parks, forests and wilderness areas these days — the blind.

In growing numbers, the sightless have been able to savor the sounds and sense the pleasures of outdoor life through use of "Braille Trails" installed in several hundred sites over the past five years.

Basically, the trails consist of hip-high nylon ropes which lead to sign markers in Braille that enable the blind to follow special paths and to read through their fingertips about the world of nature.

There are no precise figures on the number of Braille Trail miles or the number of trails available, because they range from small community projects in city parks to rugged excursions into state and national forests.

A spokesman for the Interior Department's Bureau of Outdoor Recreation, which is encouraging a program to promote the trails, estimates that the blind now have available about 500 miles of exploration in 200 to 225 nature centers.

Some provide walks of only one-third of a mile through quiet park paths within city limits. Others allow the blind to experience the wilderness on more rugged expeditions into state or national preserves.

THE FIRST Braille Trail came into being in 1967, according to the Interior Department, at Colorado's White River National Forest. It was suggested by Robert B. Lewis of Aspen, who said at that time:

"It is not beyond the realm of possibility that there may some day be a network of such trails across the country in woodlands, along streams, in the mountains and even the deserts."

The idea caught on so well at the federal, state and local levels that Lewis' prediction of a cross-country network is within achievement. Trails for the blind have proliferated, and elements of a coast-to-coast system now are within a one-day drive of most parts of the country.

James G. Watt, director of the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation who is heading a drive for more Braille Trails, said: "There is hardly a single patch of green which would not be enhanced by marking a Braille Trail."

For instance in May a 142-mile Braille nature trail will be completed at Elephant Rocks State Park near Graniteville, Mo., financed through matching federal-state grants totaling $25,500. The blind will be able to explore the massive prehistoric outcroppings of rock, some of which are 27 feet high and 600 tons.

BY NYLON ROPE and Braille markers, they can explore the boulder-strewn area, be told what they are "seeing" and find benches and rest rooms as well. On some trails, transistorized tapes are used instead of the Braille messages for the sightless visitors, describing the bird and plant life around them.

As an example, a Braille message in Colorado's White River Forest tells the visitor: "Kneel down and feel the remains of an old tree. Feel the top of the stump carefully. Can you feel the concentric rings, the corrugations? Each ring is a year's growth. Smell the wet wood. No cleaner smell exists. Marvel that decay can be so clean. Jump on the soil. Note how springy it is. You are working across the lower end of a bog."

Driftwood—the 'instant terror' of the Pacific Northwest beaches

LINCOLN CITY, Ore. (UPI) — Driftwood, one of the wonders of the Pacific Northwest beaches — can turn into instant terror, too.

The myriad kinds of driftwood which litter Pacific beaches from Washington to Northern California provide a beachcomber's delight.

But each year beach visitors lose their lives to storm-tossed logs, and the states haven't yet found an effective way to prevent the accidents.

Despite outraged demands in the past to do something to prevent the toll, Oregon has concluded it can do nothing.

THE STATE HIGHWAY division posts signs along beaches to warn of the danger of rolling logs.

"There's no real solution," says David Talbot, Oregon parks director. "It's just a constant education program to make people aware."

In 1964, after several people were killed by logs on a weekend, Gov. Mark Hatfield ordered the state highway division to clear the beaches of all dangerous logs.

An astounded highway division quickly surveyed the 400 miles of Oregon coastline.

The first thought was to burn the logs — but coastal residents protested the air pollution which would result. Most of the dangerous logs were too wet to burn, anyway.

Tom Edwards, highway engineer, recalls that the next best plan was to use chain saws to cut up the huge timbers and trees, with the expectation that residents would haul home the free firewood.

"We estimated it would cost $15 million to take care of the logs along the coast," Edwards said.

BUT THE PROJECT bogged down shortly after it started.

For one thing, Edwards said, the logs are usually permeated by sand and by the time one log is cut it had dulled a chain saw beyond use.

And within days after a section of beach was cleared, new storms would toss up a new supply of debris.

It comes from many sources — anything that floats is washed to sea by the periodic winter floods in the Pacific Northwest. That usually includes entire trees sometimes five feet thick, bridge timbers, etc. Other driftwood is in the form of usable lumber swept from the decks of lumber freighters caught in offshore storms.

"Our conclusion," Edwards said, "was that this is one of those things there is no reasonable, practical way to get rid of. We learned by bad example. We just couldn't handle it — it's like trying to stop the weather."

The targets were the "rollers" — logs close enough to tidal action to be moved by the water.

TONS OF DRIFTWOOD farther back on the beaches pose no threat at all. In fact they offer both wind breaks for beachgoers, and readily available wood for campfires.

Talbot says there is no such thing as a safe log on the beach. "An extra high wave can come along to throw what was a safe log right at you," he says.

Beachgoers have been killed by falling from a rolling log, or getting battered by a wave-tossed one.

There is no central registry of such deaths, so the complete toll cannot be ascertained. But each year there are at least a couple of such fatalities.

Freak waves along the West Coast in late November, 1972, caused the deaths of at least six persons. Four of those were crushed by logs.

ERA draws strong support

Thank you for your editorial support of the Equal Rights Amendment. Legislators need to know that the media as well as individuals, both male and female are in support of this amendment. Through combined efforts perhaps Illinois will join other progressive states and ratify the ERA.

Brenda Porter
Rolling Meadows

We can no longer afford the luxury of denying the minority majority their equal rights. A revolution is taking place in the life patterns of women and girls.

A girl today should be able to anticipate a very different way of life from that of her grandmother and even her mother.

However, the Illinois State Legislature seems to be in a quandary about whether or not it should allow women their God given rights, by passing the ERA. The passing of the Equal Rights Amendment would finally give equal employment opportunities to women. Discrimination against women in business lies in both the area of earnings and in the area of obtaining and functioning in supervisory or policy making positions. The 1964 civil rights bill gave equal opportunity to minorities — but forgot about the majority, women.

Women will not be drafted if ERA is passed Congress has had this power since 1940 and never used it.

ERA will not abolish alimony and child support. Nor will it "force women out of their traditional roles as housewives and mothers" — and into the labor market, as some opponents suggest. ERA will give women "the freedom of choice."

Some people argue passionately that Constitutional protection be extended to the unborn — while they fight tooth and nail to exclude women from the same protection. Some say ERA will undermine the institutions of marriage and the family. Nothing could be further from the truth. Women are the very ones who can see the security and benefits which marriage can give to the parents and the child.

ERA can bring equal opportunity to women. ERA can insure her a freedom of choice. ERA can bring men and women into focus instead of continuing in the pattern of resentment and Master/Servant relationships. Vote yes for ERA.

Everybody's praised

This is in appreciation to those who assisted us on the evening of January 23.

Our 3½-year-old son gashed his head near the eye. Our oldest daughter (16) applied direct pressure on the wound while our oldest son (17) got cold wet compresses. Another daughter (15) tried to contact my husband unsuccessfully so she called an ambulance. They arrived almost before she replaced the receiver.

My husband, while at a friend's working on radios, heard the dispatch. He went home and sent our friend to pick me up and bring me to the hospital.

Our thanks to our children for their quick actions (and remembering their first aid), to the paramedics, police and those at the hospital in emergency.

It's comforting to know that when an accident does happen, there is someone to help.

stitutional amendment as the only effective way left for equal rights to be given to women. It would take forever to fight each and every discriminatory law one by one.

Society and woman's role therein is changing too rapidly for this slow process.

Write your legislators to vote "yes" on ERA so that women may not only be given credit for their fantastic talents as wives, housewives and mothers, but also in realms outside the home.

Many thanks to Paddock Publications for endorsing ERA.

It is of vital concern to all men and women to receive fair employment, recognition, education — in short to be considered equal "human beings."

Human beings, write your legislators in Springfield and tell them you want a "Yes" vote for ERA.

Abortion ruling annoys, pleases readers

What's coming off here?

She remembers Franklin store

It was too short a time ago that I found the pleasure and delight of shopping in the little Ben Franklin store in Palatine. It seemed to reflect its manager, John Wilson, friendly, kind, and courteous along with the employees of patient and sweet older ladies. A 29 cent sale was treated with as much care as a $29 sale.

To visit the store was like going home: a step into the past. Because of its friendly warmth, I bought items there that could have been purchased elsewhere, other items priced more reasonable and little craft items were bought because they were not even obtainable at other stores. The quaint toy department downstairs, scene of the recent tragedy, was my children's shopping place with clutched coins little gifts for others or themselves were bought. The best corner of all was a wall covered with bins of penny candy from which they could select their choices and then drop into a plastic bucket provided by the store to bring to the checkout lady, who transferred each small treasure into a little bag. My children cried for a long time when they heard of the end of their favorite store and its creator.

In the Northwest suburbs, we lost more than a man and his store, we lost one more of an endangered species, a small business where persons counted more than volume sales. Our hearts go out to his family and the families of the other two brave men. They know best the loss of which I speak.

Doesn't anyone in "Heraldland" agree with the newspaper's stand on the abortion issue? Are we going to sit back and let the Herald take the punches all alone?

I, for one, thank you Herald editors for supporting the Supreme Court's decision. Perhaps the rest of the open-minded liberal spirited citizens in our area are too exhausted to write any more letters now that the 've finally won their rightful battle.

The issues concerning abortion — pro and con — have become so redundant that I won't bother stating them again.

Please understand that all the pro-abortion people who worked so hard and were so verbal previous to the Supreme Court decision, are now busy at work in new endeavors, such as the Equal Rights for Women act. Surely there will be much controversy on this issue also, but eventually it too will pass.

Bobbie Sachs
Arlington Heights

May we add our name to the growing list of people who oppose the January 22 decision of the U. S. Supreme Court and the March 1 decision of the Illinois District Court to legalize abortion.

Murder by definition is the unlawful taking of another life. If abortion is legal, then by definition it is no longer murder. In this period of time when it has become fashionable to consider an act as neither right nor wrong but a hazy in-between hue, perhaps these decisions have eased a few minds.

However, killing, by definition, the destruction of human life, is wrong. Following fertilization the embryo has the complementary number of human chromosomes which distinguishes it as Homo Sapiens and also distinguishes it as an individual, distinct from its parents.

Abortion is a deliberate act of killing a fellow human.

'Oakton needs Des Plaines voice'

One school election that does not seem to be attracting much attention is that for trustee of Oakton Community College, the college district for Maine and Niles Townships. The absence of a Des Plaines candidate and an election contest until now has no doubt contributed to this situation. However, such is no longer the case. The recent resignation opening a fourth seat on the Board emphasizes the importance of the election.

The problems of Oakton College are too serious to permit Maine Township to be underrepresented on the board at trustees, especially since Maine is somewhat more conservative than Niles Township. A voice for a more traditional and higher standard approach to education is needed. This is the perfect time to establish such a voice. It is my desire to be that new voice.

As a Des Plaines resident with two children, I am concerned with the quality of education here, as well as other school-related issues. As a teacher in the Niles Township high schools, I am aware of the current problems and trends in education and of the difficulties of Oakton College. Many of our graduates attend Oakton full-time, and more of our graduates and residents attend part-time and through the MONACEP program. These are the people most injured by a sub-standard program. I hope to be a part of the solution to the problem.

Issues such as site selection and property tax rate are also important. Far too many actions have been taken in the past that seem designed only to alienate the taxpayers of the district. While improvement of the college is necessary, such improvements must occur only within the approval of the residents of the area.

Oakton Community College was created to meet a great need of the people of Maine and Niles Townships. I do not believe that it is currently meeting such need. After April 14, I hope to help it meet such need as a member of the Board of Trustees.

She enjoyed 'Black Sambo'

I have been reading your newspaper for years, and I am amazed at some of the articles that have been written by a few people, who apparently have nothing to do all day but find things wrong with our society and to stir up trouble.

What really got me upset, was the fact that someone could not think of anything else to find wrong, at this particular time, so they brought up "Little Black Sambo."

If "this is an 'appalling story,' well, I must say this pathetic mother and father must have been raised with very little education.

I remember the story of "Little Black Sambo" (now that the Herald has brought it up) and when I was a child, it was one of my favorite nursery rhymes. In fact I almost forgot "Little Black Sambo" was actually black until I saw his picture in your paper.

Believe me, when I was in the second grade, it was the lesser time in my life, that I even thought about black and white.

The nursery rhyme that has always stuck in my mind though, was about the princess who was supposed to feel a "pea" under I don't know how many mattresses. In order to prove she was a real princess. To me, this is a far more ignorant story involving a white person, and as yet I haven't heard any complaints about it from any of the other races.

If you believe "Little Black Sambo" is so appalling a story, I am almost sure you have let your children know how you feel, which shall make them realize all the more that there is something different between black and white.

Personally, I am tired of hearing about black and white, yellow and red people. Maybe if we didn't hear so much about the different skin colors, we wouldn't pay

Fast breeder reactor criticized

An article in the February 27 issue describing the fast breeder reactor as the hope for the future in solving U.S. energy shortages — couldn't be further from the truth. There are overriding disadvantages that make the breeder reactor a frightening gamble.

One, the possibility exists that a fast breeder could blow up, like a nuclear bomb. This would be a disaster of great magnitude — "unlikely, perhaps, but possible," writes biologist Richard H. Wagner in Environment and Man. "When viewed in this light, confidence in conventional fall-safe devices fades quickly," he adds.

Second, the fuel used, plutonium, is one of the most dangerous radioactive materials known because of its extremely long life. It takes 24,000 years for a given quantity of plutonium to dissipate half of its radioactivity. If any of it escaped into the environment, it would remain dangerously radioactive for 100,000 years. Dr. John Gofman, a physicist, notes that less than one-millionth of a gram of plutonium can cause cancer, and that in a fast-breeder program, the nation would be handling 100 tons of plutonium a year.

Third, plutonium is the fissionable material used in making Nagasaki-type atomic bombs. The possibility of some of it reaching a worldwide black market is receiving serious consideration in scientific circles and within the Atomic Energy Commission. The technology and hardware to convert five kilograms of plutonium into a bomb is readily available.

Fourth, as with existing fission reactors, the fastbreeder produces radioactive wastes which present enormous disposal problems. These wastes would

Durning backs Elk Grove's 'Old Chukker'

It is that time of year when incumbents point with pride toward their long record of past accomplishments, real or imaginary. Conversely, those seeking elective political office will feverishly research the records in hopes of finding or developing an issue. So be it, for from such threads the fabric of our democratic institutions is woven. The quality and durability of that fabric will be in the exclusive hands of the skilled weavers, the voters who cast their ballots on election day.

Charles Zetek is too modest a man to claim credit for all that is excellent in Elk Grove Village. But, as one of its pioneer residents, Chuck has over the past 12 years in municipal office, helped guide the destiny of our community. He has seen and helped it mature from a modest beginning to one of national envy. That accelerated growth does not just happen as a natural consequence. Someone has to accept responsibility and make things move in a positive vein.

In my limited association with the "Old Chukker," I have observed a quality of leadership often sought but seldom found. Above all, his courage of conviction is not just another trite phrase. I have also heard him publicly reverse his position in view of new facts and publicly admit an error in judgment. He is not infallible — how many of us are?

His interest in the children of our community is almost legendary. He is as much at home on a baseball diamond as he is presiding over the board of trustees.

Chuck Zetek's actions on behalf of our senior citizens augurs well for their future and that of our community.

The "Old Chukker" has "spit to windward" for a long time. We like the "cut of his job." Let's keep him at the helm.

Democracy or republic?

In the recent "Focus" flyer, distributed to all residences in High School Dist. 214, there was an article entitled "Who Pays for Schools?" The obvious ignorance of the author regarding our form of government and the "rights" of our citizens, causes me to write this letter.

At least two times in the article, the author referred to our form of government as a "democracy." Where, may I ask, in the Constitution is the word "democracy" ever found? The answer is that it is not. For the information of the author of the above article — we live in a republic — a fact that too few of our citizens seem to be aware of today.

an even greater hypocrisy that she mentioned would be people that felt war was wrong but abortion is all right.

There was never a time I felt the war was right, but I feel as strong in my opinion that abortion is wrong. What could be worse than killing an innocent person that cannot even protest.

As far as your old rhetoric, Herald, about the decision being left to the individual involved — who are you kidding? There are two individuals involved. Why should only one be heard?

As far as a doctor taking the time to counsel, that's great — what would they discuss, the right to live?

have to be stored in vaults for hundreds and hundreds of years — for far longer periods of time than any governments on earth ever have endured.

The risks in the fast-breeder program are frightening. Everything would have to work perfectly, from design and operation of the plants, to handling, transport and security of fuels, to ultimate disposal of radioactive wastes.

In light of these grave risks, it seems almost macabre to refer to the fast breeder reactor as a "hope for the future."

Lauds Mount Prospect paramedics

Dear Fire Chief Pairitz, Mount Prospect:

I want to take this opportunity to express my sincere thanks to the two-man crew of the fire department ambulance who so graciously responded to our call for "help" on Sunday morning, February 18.

My wife had fallen on a small patch of ice outside our home and she had seriously injured her back and needed to be transported to Holy Family Hospital Emergency Room for immediate x-rays and admission to the hospital.

Their prompt, courteous and thoroughly professional handling of their job will be long remembered with enduring gratitude by my wife and myself. She was handled expertly and thoughtfully and her ride was care and safety personified.

It is indeed a pleasure to know that we in Mount Prospect have this kind of service at our fingertips — by simply dialing the telephone. Even our request that they come very quietly and without fanfare so as not to alarm or awaken our friends and neighbors was granted; for this we are also grateful.

I agree with everything said in Ms. Pope's letter but you have to stop all killing, not just exchange one killing for another. As far as your reasoning, Herald, you'll have to do more than "acknowledge the sincerity of opposing forces." There are too many holes in your reasoning. You're right about one thing — it is an emotional issue. Too bad more people aren't emotional about it — murder is murder under any name!

Mary E. Bangert

I have made it a point never to use names in replying to letters in the Fence Post so as not to engage in personal vendettas. However, please let me make an exception this time.

In reply to Sharon Angeletti, what difference does it make to anyone if I'm Mrs. Miss, Ms. or Mr.? My opinions would still be the same and I know I can't force them on anybody. I do have the right to state them, just as she has the right to state hers. Out of consideration for people with the same first name as my husband, who may not hold the same convictions as I do, I use my name. I speak for myself only.

You ask who I am to judge anybody. I do not judge. I asked a question which infuriated you. I know as sure as I'm writing this letter that only God can judge us. I do have the duty to speak out for the sake of my children and grandchildren. They're the ones, who if God wills, will inherit the earth.

Thank you, Sharon, and have a nice day.

Hinsdale Central wins again

Mid-Suburban gym squads record 2-3-4 state finish

Gymnastics Editor

There's no defense in gymnastics.

That's why Hinsdale Central, for an unprecedented fourth consecutive year, wears the title of Illinois High School Association Gymnastics Champion.

In an almost tiresome script, the Red Devils posted 120 points in emerging from a charge of five teams down the stretch of the finals Saturday night at Prospect High School.

As usual, a Mid-Suburban League representative was left holding the bridesmaid's bouquet. Elk Grove, challenging from wire to wire, claimed the handsome runnerup trophy with 110 while conference rivals Hersey (99.6) and Rolling Meadows (93.5) edged Niles North's 90.5 in a blanket finish that tantalized the excitement-lover.

Individually, Hinsdale captured team honors without the benefit of an event champion. Elk Grove and Rolling Meadows stole the offensive spotlight in that respect.

The Grenadiers crowned the state's premier side horse artist when lanky senior Bob Siemianowski unveiled a dazzling 9.0 routine before a crowd estimated at 4,000 in the Prospect field-house.

Meadows, in only its second year of competition, pulled off one of the meet's upsets when junior gem Mike Godawa outdistanced Niles West's freshman favorite Bart Conner, 41.20 to 40.75. Godawa's feat, interpreted by all to mean he's the finest overall gymnast in the meet, was derived from spectacular averages of 8.25 in free ex, 7.85 on horse, 8.0 on high bar and 8.5 on rings.

Others cementing the belief that the MSL is the top gym conference in the state were Arlington's 13th place finish with 38 points, Conant's 15th with 36, Palatine's share of 18th with 27.5, Wheeling's 24th with 16, Forest View's tie for 32nd with 11, Prospect's share of 39th with five and Fremd's 44th with one-half.

Considered a slight favorite to win the two-day climax with the most qualifiers (13), Elk Grove squandered away valuable ammunition in Friday's preliminaries.

"We really hurt in prelims," Grenadier coach Fred Gaines admitted. "We lost about 25 points Friday and that cost us. I know we had as many finalists (six) as Hinsdale, but we didn't do much in the way of points in the prelims and we expected more from our all-around men."

While a half dozen Grenadiers survived the preliminaries and reserved a spot under the hot television lights of Saturday night's finals, seven didn't.

Horsemanship Mike Heiberger cashed for 15th and six points with a 7.8 routine and the respective finishes of Bill Bosslet (14th for seven points) and Scott Phillips (17th for four) prompted 11 more points for Elk Grove.

Siemianowski's unbeatable performance in the finals of side horse was a tremendous shot in the arm for the Grove and its stellar trampoline team of Dave Khoshaba (8.55 tie for fourth), Dave Hadley (8.5 sixth) and Steve Torgersen (8.45 seventh) brought the Grenadiers to within four and one-half points of Hinsdale after four events were complete in the finals.

Phillips contributed a 10th place spot on parallel bars with a 7.6 before peaking ringman Jack Henry earned a share of fifth with an 8.55.

Phillips was the recipient of a coveted honor prior to the finals when Wayne Selvig, president of the gymnastics coaches association, announced that Scott had won the first annual Outstanding Illinois Senior Gymnast Award.

The handsome trophy carried the inscription: To the athlete who most represents the spirit of Illinois high school gymnastics.

Hersey head coach Don Von Ebers was quite satisfied upon receiving the third-place team trophy. "Everyone thought we were through after qualifying only eight into the state meet," he said. "But we really made the most of it, didn't we?"

That the Huskies did.

They picked up 13 preliminary points off Joe Shepherd's 10th place all-around score of 36.35 and 19th place 6.95 on high bar while waving six into the finals including its entire floor exercise team.

The opening event was obviously Hersey's biggest point-getter as Ron Mitsos finished fifth (8.6), Steve Schwabe sixth (8.55) and Blake Frodin in a tie for 10th (8.4).

John Maseng came through again on side horse with an 8.1 routine for a share of seventh and the Huskies' trampolines duo of Jack McLaughlin (tie for fourth with 8.55) and John Braddock (tie for eighth with 8.15) added 28 more markers to the team totals.

The robust early scoring by Hersey afforded temporary leads after the first and fourth events, but with no other qualifiers remaining on either parallel bars or rings, it had to sit back and helplessly hold off charging Meadows and Niles North.

The Mustangs entered the finals with 24.5 preliminary points derived from Godawa's 15th place tie on the floor and his 21-point bonanza in all-around.

Side horseman Blaine Dahl helped his teammate out with a superb 8.45 routine for fourth in the finals, but Godawa took charge again with a sparkling 8.8 routine for third on rings, an 8.85 and tie for third on parallel bars and an 8.45 and tie for third on horizontal bar.

Arlington boasted success in two events for its points as finalists Bob Flubacher earned 11th on trampoline with a 7.3 and side horsemen John Golbeck (8.35) and Geoff Reider (7.95) captured fifth and sixth, respectively.

Conant let two men do the walking to its 10th place finish as little Tommy Gardner uncorked a beautiful 8.8 floor exercise routine for second and high bar ace Dean Miller clicked for an 8.15 and 10th.

Palatine earned three and one-half preliminary points off Dick Alcina's 8.1 routine and a share of 18th place on rings before finalists Bob Schergen (11th) hit a 7.8 high bar set and Ken Evensen (7th) contributed a masterful 8.4 on p-bars.

Wheeling's George Olson put one-half point on the board in prelims with an 8.06 and 20th place tie on rings while rapidly improved Bill Harvel snapped a nifty 8.3 and tie for fifth on parallel bars.

Don Lanham represented all of Forest View's points as he reeled off a 7.2 for 16th place in the finals of still rings and Prospect's five markers came from Steve Scheibel's 7.55 side horse routine for 16th. Fremd's Don Knigge rounded out the area's scoring with a 26th place tie on rings with an 8.05 set.

Curt Austin of York was the first individual winner with a 9.05 in free exercise preceding Siemianowski's 9.0 on horse. New Trier East's Tom Pearson captured horizontal bar with an 8.5 before Dave Daniel made York a two-time winner with an 8.85 on trampoline.

Conner, of Niles West, headed the parallel bar field with a 9.1 — the same score that Niles North's Steve Sosman achieved in winning still rings. Godawa's 41.20, again, was the class of the meet.

Complete details and more pictures will appear in tomorrow's final, special gymnastics page.

WHO THE DEVIL? The agony of waiting for the final results of the team standings is rewarding to these fans who learn that Hinsdale Central has captured the state gymnastics title for an unprecedented fourth straight year. Elk Grove finished second, Hersey third and Rolling Meadows fourth behind the Red Devils' 120 points (Photo by Bob Strawn)

Ray Meyer to speak at Hersey

Ray Meyer, who has coached varsity basketball at DePaul University for 31 seasons, will be the guest speaker Tuesday evening at the Hersey High School winter sports banquet.

Meyer has enjoyed 26 winning seasons among his first 31 at the university and has led this independent representative into six NCAA and seven NIT tournaments.

Meyer arrived at DePaul in time to help launch the new big man era for basketball with a gangling youth named George Mikan.

Playing for Meyer this past winter was freshman Andy Pancratz who prepped at Hersey while earning All-State honors.

The winter sports program will begin at 6:45 p.m. in the cafeteria with the basketball, wrestling, gymnastics and swimming teams honored.

Elgin, Niles West one win away from Champaign

By LARRY EVERHART

Will the real Maroons please stand up? That's probably what Elgin fans were asking prior to Friday's battle with St. Charles for the Fremd Sectional title and Sweet Sixteen berth.

And they were delighted when the emphatic answer came within a few moments after the opening tip. Unlike its previous outing, Elgin looked like a team which has run up a 20-1 record as it crushed St. Charles (21-8) in routine fashion, 72-47.

The Maroons this time lived up to the adjective "awesome," which had been placed beside their name all season, and like a team with as good a chance for the state title as any. Friday's game, to them, was little more than a scrimmage to prepare for tomorrow's supersectional test at East Aurora.

There really shouldn't have been any concern on the part of Elgin fans since their team had experienced no trouble against St. Charles before. But there was, only because the Maroons had committed 20 turnovers and played less than inspired basketball for four quarters in being forced into overtime against a much shorter St. Patrick team Tuesday.

But it became quickly evident how Elgin had twice won handsily over St. Charles during the regular Upstate season (the score was 97-59 the last time). The Saints' lifeblood was the fast break this year, but that can only be done with good rebounding.

And it was no contest on the boards Friday as 6-8 forward Terry Drake hauled in 17 rebounds and 7-foot center Jeff Wilkins 15. St. Charles' only decent board man was its ace Mark Vitali with 13.

Wilkins was as overpowering inside as a fired-up Wilt Chamberlain, easily leading all scorers with 27. Tim Jones, a 6-4 guard, dumped in 20.

Vitali paced St. Charles with 16 but still experienced one of his coldest nights with only eight of 25 field goal attempts finding their mark. Jeff Howard, 6-3 guard who had scored 17 points in Wednesday's easy 81-52 win over Palatine, was the coldest Saint with only five of 20 from the floor.

If you consider two other statistics, the question is not why the Saints lost, but why it wasn't by more. They shot an icy 27 per cent from the floor and went to the free throw line only three times all night. Elgin thus showed that big men can play good defense without fouling.

Coach Bill Chesbrough, one of the state's old masters with 528 career victories, has had many powerful units but has not made it downstate since 1957. This is the first time since 1960 that the Maroons have advanced to a supersectional. That year their sectional victory came by four points over a Cinderella Arlington club, but Elgin was dispatched by a George Wilson-led Marshall of Chicago team that went on to win the state title.

"We wanted to force Vitali outside," said Chesbrough of the 6-foot-5 Saint superstar who led the Upstate Eight in scoring with a 28-point average but scored just 11 in two sectional games.

"Drake and (Jay) Geldmacher did a real good job on him defensively. We gambled on St. Charles' outside shooting and just tried to cut them off the baseline."

"We were going to Wilkins (inside on offense) more than we did in the regular season. (Wilkins averaged just 17 points per league game). Yes, I guess we could do that all night if we wanted to."

Both teams started slowly, but Elgin exploded after the first few minutes. St. Charles missed shot after shot and the Maroons ripped off eight points in the last minute of the quarter for the commanding 23-8 edge.

They more or less marked time in the middle two periods, actually being outscored by St. Charles, which crept as close as 34-25 early in the third period. But Wilkins quickly dumped in six more points, then laid the ball in three straight times to start the fourth quarter and turn it into a rout.

WWMM to cover 'Super' Tuesday

WWMM-FM of Arlington Heights will close out its coverage of high school basketball for 1972-73 with the Evanston Supersectional Tuesday afternoon.

Station Sports Director Dick Thomas will give the play-by-play and Herald Sports Editor Bob Frisk will offer commentary on the battle between Niles West and New Trier East.

The pre-game show is set for 3:45 p.m. at 92.7 on the FM dial with the tipoff at 4 p.m.

Captures 6th in Ebonite Open

A near miss for Les Zikes

The alternate's chair on the professional bowling tour just may be one of the most frustrating spots in sports.

You have to sit there on Saturday afternoons before a national television audience and watch five bowlers battle for the top prize money. You know just how close you came to crashing that select five.

Only the top five after 48 games make the TV finals. The sixth serves as the alternate.

Les Zikes, Jr. of Palatine, manager of Beverly Lanes in Arlington Heights and a regular on the pro tour, had to sit in that seat Saturday afternoon while Dick Weber, Norm Meyers, Ernie Schlegel, Dick Ritger, and Nelson Burton, Jr. rolled for the $10,000 first prize in the Ebonite Open in Toledo.

Weber hit nine strikes in a row in the championship match to defeat his brother-in-law Meyers 279-216.

In earlier competition Burton defeated Dick Ritger 235-233. Ernie Schlegel ousted Burton 226-226 and Weber beat Schlegel 205-173.

It was Ritger who had made the charge on Friday night that cost Zikes his first spot in a televised match. Zikes has a PBA victory but it came on the summer tour.

Les knocked down 1643 pins on Friday afternoon and ran his match game record to 12-4 to take a 31-pin lead into the evening block of eight games. He started out with two losses and then won six straight. His scores for the competition were 223, 182, 196, 236, 234, 268, 266 and 226.

Zikes had averaged 222 during the week before heading into the final block on Friday night.

Overall, Les cashed for $2,050 in taking sixth. Others in the top 10 were Gus Lampo, Sam Flammagan, Roy Buckley, and Ed Thomas.

Next stop on the bowlers tour is the $80,000 Andy Granatelli STP Classic, starting Tuesday at Bird Bowl in Miami.

UP AND IN. Niles West's Brad Cartwright delivers a 7-foot jump shot that fell for two of his 19 points Friday evening in the Indians' 58-57 sectional title victory over Maine South. Jerry Jones (35) and Jim Hirsch of the Hawks watch the graceful Niles ace fire.

by MIKE KLEIN

History's classic matchups: Tortoise and Hare, Moby Dick and Ahab, Trophy and Toilet. Fitting couples all.

Plodding feet and sea-going mammals aside, Maine South's second place sectional trophy had been relegated to an ugly floor of itty-bitty square tiles. Six feet away, a toilet.

Chances are, most anyone in the Hawks' morgue-like dressing room would have flushed the former down the latter.

In nearly perennial fashion, Bernie Brady's club had just been knocked dizzily from a sectional championship. They've had just one in five attempts.

LaGrange, Waukegan and Evanston previously disposed the Hawks. Now, add Niles West.

Behind an early surge that had Niles West up 17-9 after one period and much later 45-31, the Indians were able to outlast Maine South's heavy charge, winning 58-57.

The win at Elk Grove gives coach Billy Schurr his first sectional title. The Indians' only previous sectional appearance had been spoiled by Evanston last year. Both Maine South and Niles had 20-5 marks after Friday.

Niles West advances into tomorrow's Sweet Sixteen games. They'll meet New Trier East at 4 p.m. in McGraw Hall — Northwestern University.

"There were some awfully scary moments there," acknowledged Schurr. "The last seven times we had the ball, we only scored one point."

That was a free throw by leading scorer Brad Cartwright (18) which ultimately proved to be the winning point. It came with 36 seconds remaining after Bill Harbeck's fourth foul.

But hassled by the Hawks' suddenly alive press, the Indians committed three turnovers and went to the line as many times without success during the final two minutes.

Trailing from the outset and never ahead, the Hawks were down 45-31 with 10 minutes yet to play. They just missed catching Niles West at a questionable buzzer.

The winning Indians brought the ball upcourt a final time with just over 20 seconds remaining. Final points had already been scored by both clubs.

So down by only one, Maine South needed to foul. But, mysteriously, the Hawks didn't. Not until just two seconds remained when Tony Reibel finally kerplanked Cartwright.

"Hey, weren't we going to foul?" a wondering Brady questioned his players later.

All stops went out for both clubs when Cartwright went to the line for his bonus shot. Schurr dropped back everyone else. Brady put Bob Westman and Pete Schmeizer underneath the otherwise vacant boards.

Cartwright blew his shot, it bouncing high and to the right, Westman's side. The horn honked immediately after Westman threw his outlet pass to Schmeizer at halfcourt.

A too early horn? Brady thought so before admitting, "But we might not have made it anyway."

Until the Indians ran into trouble late against the Hawks' press, the ballgame was all theirs. Perhaps one third quarter play typified the luck and aggressive play of Niles West.

The Indians' Dan Welter, who hit eight of 16 shots and ended with 18 points, went up for a short baseline jumper. Searing by, Bill Harbeck blocked the shot . . . right into Blake Lorenz who scored an easy layup for Niles' 45-31 lead.

Lorenz and sophomore Marty Block — the Indian guards — scored six and nine points respectively. But there unquestionable claws and cool harassed South all evening.

It was Block, who didn't start varsity until mid-season, at the free throw line for one successful shot after a second quarter technical on Maine South's Brady.

And without Lorenz, who had three fouls before the first period ended, the Indians couldn't expand their lead and indeed, appeared troubled during the second period.

"He's really a great asset to us out there," said Schurr of his All-Conference guard who averaged only 7.2 points in league play. "Not only do I recognize this, but so do the Bradys, Freemans and O'Keefes."

"I can count on him 100 per cent of the time," Schurr said. "Most kids pace themselves. Some are good when the going's easy. Some rise when the going's tough. But this guy goes all the time."

"He's not the least bit selfish, greedy or bucket-hungry," Schurr said of Lorenz. "He's one of the best you'll ever find."

SCORE BY QUARTERS

Niles West 17 17 11 13-58

Maine South 8 17 10 22-57

Maine South was out-of-pattern Friday night. The Hawks got absolutely nothing from 6-foot-6 sophomore center Pete Boesen who Brady eventually benched. The kid didn't score, managing just one rebound and two fouls.

But replacement Schmeizer, a 6-foot-6 junior, hit five of 10 shots and grabbed 18 rebounds. The Hawks led in boards, 37-23. Niles managed just four offensive boards. But the Indians shot 57 per cent so there weren't many available.

Maine All-State candidate Jerry Jones didn't get a shot until 1:15 of the first period. The he missed a tip try. Jones' first bucket was at 5:43 of the second period.

Jones finished with 17 points to lead the Hawks. Guard Harbeck had 14 and led the comeback with six of his seven buckets coming during the last period.

But Harbeck took 20 shots and Jones only 15, each making seven. Shooting rapid-fire, Harbeck didn't hit a bucket during the second or third periods.

Niles West began having late trouble at about the five-minute mark when it led 49-41. Schurr didn't want a stall but the Indians fell into a nearly disastrous one anyway.

"We didn't want to shoot anything but an uncontested layup," said Schurr. "Then the bottom just about fell out."

Welter hit two layups, Niles' last field goals, during that stretch. He gave West a 53-41 lead with a 3:34 uncontested lay-up. All that followed were two free throws by Lorenz plus three by Cartwright.

Outlook good for flood relief program here

by JOE FRANZ

Major flood relief for Buffalo Grove and Wheeling residents came one step closer Friday with the announcement of a forthcoming agreement for construction of a 100-acre retention lake on Buffalo Creek.

Buffalo Grove Village Mgr. Daniel Larson said Friday the Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD) announced it was the opinion of attorneys that it could finance the $2.8 million project even though it was outside the district's jurisdiction.

Larson said although the MSD will finance the entire project, the Lake County Forest Preserve District will have to obtain the land through condemnation. This will take about six months. Construction will probably begin late this year or early next year and take four months to complete, he said.

THE 144-ACRE parcel is located at the southwest corner of Arlington Heights and Checker roads. Most of the site is farm land, although there are two homes involved.

When completed the retention lake will have a capacity of 2 million gallons of water. It will hold run-off into Buffalo Creek from areas northwest of Buffalo Grove.

"This is a major regional flood control project," Larson said. "It will control all the water that flows into the village from the west."

Larson explained that water from upstream (northwest) flows in a southeasterly direction into Buffalo Grove and Wheeling. At the time of a heavy rainstorm the excessive amount of water coming downstream overloads the sewers and causes flooding.

The retention pond, to be located to the northwest of Buffalo Grove, will catch and retain the water so it cannot run downstream. This will give the sewer systems in the villages less water to handle, Larson said.

AFTER THE STORM is over, and the sewer systems are equipped to handle additional water, the retention lake will release the water under controlled conditions. This will allow it to flow through Wheeling and Buffalo Grove without creating flooding, Larson explained.

Under extreme conditions when the retention lake is filled to its capacity, it will take a maximum of four days for the excess water to run out and the lake to return to its normal size of 10 acres.

Although most of the retention lake will be located in Lake County, it will be of little benefit to Lake County residents because they are located upstream from the project. Downstream Cook County residents will benefit most. Some sections of Prospect Heights will also benefit from the lake.

BUFFALO GROVE and Wheeling officials have been working for this project since 1967.

The Hollywood Ridge area of Wheeling, north of Dundee Road and west of Ill. Rte. 63 will particularly benefit from it. Homes in the area border on the south side of Buffalo Creek, and often experience flooding when the creek overflows its banks in heavy rains, according to Wheeling officials.

In regard to the project, trustee William Hein, chairman of the sewer and water committee of the Wheeling Village Board said, "It will be helping keep the creek at a lower level. It will probably be most felt in that area (Hollywood Ridge)."

He also said that less water would go into the Wheeling drainage ditch as a result of the lake.

In Buffalo Grove all the areas along Buffalo Creek will benefit from the retention lake.

Buffalo Grove will assume responsibility for maintenance of the spillway and control facilities at the lake, following its completion.

The area around the lake will be developed into a public park and will be suitable for sports activities. When the lake is not being used for flood control, it will be open to the public for boating and fishing, said Larson.

DAMAGE TO APARTMENTS in the River-Willow Garden Apartments was estimated at $90,000 after a fire broke out in the attic of the building early Saturday. According to Wheeling Fire Chief Bernie Koeppe, most of the damage was caused by smoke and water, with very little resulting from the blaze itself. Firemen from six departments fought the blaze for three hours in high winds and snow.

Village bd. to discuss second road payment

The Wheeling Village Board tonight will consider the second payment to Rock Road Construction Co. for work on the Wheeling Road extension. The board will meet at 8 p.m.

Work on Wheeling Road began last year, but halted when winter weather arrived. So far curbs and gutters for the new intersection on Dundee Road have been installed. Excavation work for the road bed is near completion, and will resume when weather permits.

Apartment couple averted tragedy

Five families left homeless by a fire early Saturday morning at 916 Old Willow Rd. in unincorporated Wheeling Township owe a great deal to their neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. William Senecal. Wheeling Fire Chief Bernie Koeppe credited the Senecals with getting residents of the burning apartment building out alive.

The fire was discovered around 3 a.m. by Mrs. Senecal who said she was awakened by what sounded like someone throwing rocks at her bedroom window. She said when she looked out the window she could see sparks from the fire in the adjoining building of the River-Willow Garden Apartments.

"I WOKE UP my husband and told him to call the fire department, and then I got dressed and ran over to the building to wake up the people," she said. "I met a boy who helped my husband and I wake up the residents."

The boy, about 19, was not identified. Senecal said to his knowledge no one knew of the fire since it was in the attic of the building. He said there was very little smoke in the building while he was waking residents.

When told that Koeppe credited them with saving the lives of residents in the building, the Senecals said, "We did what we had to do."

The fire, which caused an estimated $90,000 damage, lasted about three hours.

Firemen from Wheeling, Buffalo Grove, Mount Prospect, Prospect Heights, Northbrook and the Glenview rural fire protection district battled the flames in high winds and snow. Firemen from the Vernon Township Fire Department stood by at the Wheeling Fire Station.

THE EARLY morning blaze was contained in the upper area of the building.

Koeppe, who directed the fire fighting with chiefs from Northbrook and Glenview, said the ceiling of the building prevented the fire from spreading. He said that while the cause of the fire is undetermined, officials believe it started in the attic above the second floor laundry room because that was where the heaviest damage occurred.

Residents from surrounding apartments, the Salvation Army and the Red Cross aided the homeless residents and provided food and coffee for the more than 70 fire fighters at the scene.

Owners of the apartment complex were reportedly finding other apartments for the homeless victims.

Replacement picked

Willow Grove School Principal out

The resignation of Robert Lanum, principal of Willow Grove School in Buffalo Grove, was accepted by the Dist. 96 school board last week.

Kent Rich, who is currently principal of Kildeer School, will replace Lanum.

On the recommendation of the Community Relations Committee, the board has decided to temporarily close Kildeer School after the third school in the district is opened early next year. Dr. Ronald Warwick, administrative assistant, is slated to fill in for Rich at Kildeer School until the building is closed.

LANUM HAS BEEN principal at Willow Grove for the past three years. He is leaving the post, he said, to take a job outside the field of education.

"I've been in education for the past 23 years," Lanum said, "I'd just like to try something else."

During Lanum's administration at Willow Grove, the Individual Guided Education (IGE) program was put into operation.

Commenting on it, Lanum said, "It's really a wonderful program. We have a long way to go, but we've taken a lot of steps forward. I'd say we're well on our way."

The Economic Stabilization Act, which gave the President authority to issue Phase I and Phase II wage and price controls, expires April 30. Militant Indians occupying Wounded Knee, S.D. booted a new government proposal asking them to lay down their arms and submit peacefully to arrest. There has been no formal response by American Indian Movement leaders to the proposal. Many have vowed to die rather than surrender.

A stick of dynamite exploded near a Denver, Colo. police substation and a Molotov cocktail hit a community relations storefront a day after battles between police and snipers left one man dead and 19 injured. Mexican-American leaders in Denver say police used excessive action in breaking into apartments and making wholesale arrests.

Twenty-five school children had to be evacuated from a northern Indiana farmhouse where they had been stranded since Saturday when their school bus became bogged down in deep snow while returning from a field trip. Three National Guard helicopters were sent in and other copters were used to reach motorists stranded in drifts across the northeast section of the state.

The world

Communist rebels unleashed rocket attacks on the suburbs of Phnom Penh, capital of Cambodia, shortly before celebrations of the third anniversary of Prince Norodom Sihanouk's overthrow were to begin. The prince's mother and eight other members of the royal family were placed under arrest after Saturday's bombing attack on the presidential palace by his son-in-law. Despite the attacks thousands of Cambodians sang and danced in the streets.

Ten bombings, 25 shootings and a land-mine explosion killed at least two persons in 24 hours in Belfast, giving blood-soaked Ireland its worst weekend in months. The explosion of a bomb-laden car outside a border pub killed a man in the car and slightly injured 25 persons attending a St. Patrick's Day celebration.

The dollar will be on its own today when European and Japanese money markets reopen and the "dirty float" worked out by 14 finance ministers takes effect, putting the value of the American currency at the mercy of supply and demand. Most ministers hope the market value of the dollar will be about the same as when it was at a fixed rate.

Denies high student costs

Oakton president responds to report critical of college

Oakton Community College has answered charges of a highly critical accreditation team that found, among other things, "perfunctory" teaching and "deplorable" housekeeping in a visit to the college last fall.

William Koehnline, Oakton president, in a formal response to the North Central Association, said steps are being taken to remedy problems cited by the team, including unusually high grades given to students who plan to transfer to four-year colleges.

Koehnline also denied the team's charge that "Oakton student costs are hundreds of dollars greater than the Illinois average" for junior colleges.

"As a matter of fact," he said, "Oakton's costs are in line with the statewide averages."

According to figures released Friday by David Hilquist, college business manager, Oakton's average cost per student hour is $46.97, a dollar less than the statewide average of $47.97.

CREDIT HOUR costs at other area junior colleges, Hilquist said, are: Harper College — $50.77; Lake County Junior College — $46.42; and College of DuPage — $49.83. Oakton's cost per full-time student, he said, is $1,569, compared to a state average of $1,589.

In his response, Koehnline said the team from North Central, an association that grants accreditation to Midwest colleges and high schools, included "charge back" fees totaling $257,222 in figuring Oakton's cost per credit hour.

These fees are paid for students from

William Koehnline

Oakton's Maine Township-Niles Township district who attend other junior colleges.

"Since these students are not included in the enrollment figures, this cost should not be included in operating expenses when they are to be compared with those of other colleges," Koehnline said.

Also in the response, to be filed with North Central later this month, the Oakton president answered a number of other criticisms, including:

—Lower standards and higher grades in "college parallel" programs for students who will spend two years at Oakton and plan to transfer to a four-year college to obtain a bachelor's degree.

Koehnline said the team "accurately" observed that although most Oakton students were rated below average academically as high school seniors, 53 per cent of the grades received were A or B, described by the team as a "generous quota."

THE TEAM URGED establishment of standards admission for the college parallel program, "upgrading the rigor and quality" of classroom teaching, a demand for "more quality and quantity" in out-of-class work from students, and a change in the generous grading policies.

One of the team members at one point called classroom teaching at Oakton "perfunctory" and said there was "considerable room for improvement."

"It is indisputably true," Koehnline said in the response, "that grades given at Oakton are higher than those commonly given in courses at senior colleges. The faculty is quite aware of this fact and is taking steps to remedy it."

—Housekeeping. The team cited dirty halls and rooms, messy laboratories with improper care of equipment, defaced desks and walls and "a general air of not caring about how things look or how they are maintained."

Koehnline said heavy use of buildings on Oakton's temporary campus in Morton Grove during both the day and evening hours make a high level of cleanliness impossible. Defacing of desks, he said, was done before they were acquired used by the college.

Admitting to some "elements of carelessness," Koehnline said, however, that the attitude of the college staff is "a side effect of the original deliberate decision . . . not to replicate the oppressive atmosphere of the high schools against which

'72 United Motor Coach losses: $85,000

A "terrible December" may push United Motor Coach Co. losses for 1972 to nearly $85,000.

The financially-troubled firm, which is negotiating to sell its facilities to the city-controlled Des Plaines Mass Transit District, lost $53,118 in 1971. The firm has operated at a deficit since 1965.

Bus company officials expect to release a final 1972 audit April 2.

"The auditors have told us that losses in 1972 will be about $85,000," John Hanck, bus company general manager, said Friday.

United apparently had stemmed its financial operating problems last fall with the subsidized purchase of $500,000 in school mini buses. Losses through August totaled $84,000 to $95,000, Hanck said. "We then had a few months in the black. But December was terrible. We lost about $25,000."

SCHOOL VACATIONS caused the operating loss. "We've been subsidizing schools in this area for a long time with our rates," Hanck said. "The children only pay when they go to school or are using the bus."

Twenty grammar school rides on a United bus cost $3.75. Ten high school rides are $2.25. When school is out, the student riders disappear, but bus runs continue.

"The charters and schools are our backbone. Schools are good because we're doing a volume," Hanck said.

United suffered its greatest financial deficit in 1968 when losses totaled more than $130,000. In 1969 the drop was about the same as anticipated in 1972 — $84,000.

The 1971 losses were based on $1,283,512 in gross receipts with $1,197,443 in operating costs and $122,790 in administrative costs, Hanck said. About $993,300 was passenger revenue and $255,058 came from charter service.

HANCK ESTIMATED that the firm owes $75,000 in bills. The city council turned $12,971 over in January to the bus firm to offset operating losses. The city's subsidy in 1972 was about $13,000.

"We don't have enough money, enough passengers, to pay our bills," Hanck said. "We're struggling and feel lucky to wind up with only $85,000 in losses."

"It would take many months of operating at a profit to get a correct cash flow, to make a payroll without having to worry about it," Hanck said.

Mayor Herbert Behrel last week said the city may continue United subsidies, instead of purchasing the firm, if the Illinois General Assembly approves a regional mass transit plan this session.

The legislature approved $12.6 million in aid to the Chicago Transit Authority Thursday. The House 100-60 vote was assured after Republican and Democrat leaders agreed to provide legislation by May 15 for a regional mass transit authority in the Chicago area.

Local officials also are hopeful that a North Suburban Mass Transit District $4.7 million federal-state grant application will provide at least 20 new buses for United and cut into operating expenses.

Bill would give bus firm $130,000 annually

State Rep. Robert Juckett, R-Park Ridge, last week introduced a bill that would reimburse United Motor Coach Co. for carrying school children, providing about $130,000 annually for the ailing firm.

The House measure calls for an appropriation of $350,000 for aid to private bus companies that carry students at less than full fares. A similar Juckett bill two years ago was not enacted.

Because fare discounts for school children are "mandated" by the Illinois Commerce Commission, Juckett said in a press statement, bus companies should be compensated for the resulting losses.

CLEANUP TIME at the former Place For People. Erwin Roschke, chairman of the center's board, and Ald. Spencer Chase (3rd) scrape wall decorations from the closed 1415 Ellinwood St. youth center. City officials are working Saturdays to redecorate the center for subleasing. The center owed about $1,000 for rent and utilities when it closed Feb. 7.

Police unit president suspended

Patrolman William Spyrisson, president of the Des Plaines chapter of the Combined Counties Police Association (CCPA), was suspended for three days without pay last week on charges of insubordination.

The suspension came Thursday after Spyrisson refused to send a routine memo to Police Chief Arthur Hintz indicating that he had reported late for his 3 p.m. to midnight shift.

Spyrisson said he refused to send the memo because he had originally called in sick that day but later agreed to report when he was told there would be a shortage of patrolmen on duty.

Current contract negotiations between the city and CCPA will not be affected by the incident, said Spyrisson, a member of the CCPA bargaining team.

The matter had been turned over to the city's board of police and fire commissioners who will decide whether Spyrisson will be paid for the three days.

No hearing date has been set by the board.

Heavy tractor stolen, valued at $28,000

A heavy tractor valued at $28,000 was stolen when thieves forced their way into a storage yard outside the Rock Road Construction Co., 125 Armstrong Rd., according to Des Plaines police.

Company officials told police the theft probably occurred sometime between Feb. 1 and last Wednesday. Police are currently investigating the case.

City may give controversial unit broader enforcement

New powers for environment group?

Des Plaines much talked-about, memberless Environmental Control Commission may receive broadened enforcement powers at tonight's 8 p.m. city council meeting.

On second reading is an ordinance abolishing the Air Pollution Appeal Board — which never met — and turning its powers over to the environmental commission.

Also on second reading is an ordinance allowing appeal to the commission of decisions by the city's environmental control officer, calling for monthly commission meetings and requiring two of the six appointed members to have either engineering or science college degrees.

THE PROPOSED ordinances were prepared by the council's environmental controls committee in December 1972 to "force Mayor (Herbert) Behrel to appoint commission members post haste," Ald. Robert Michaels (8th) said. The commission was formed March 2, 1972.

DUTIES OF THE commission, which so far has no members, will be "to investigate complaints . . . and to initiate investigations . . . to disseminate information relative to pollution control . . . advise the city council from time to time in pollution prevention and control."

First job of the commission, when appointed, will be to plan distribution of the city's environmental handbook which was approved by the council in January and was printed last month.

IN OTHER action, the council will consider city election and commuter parking "housekeeping" ordinances. Both are on first reading.

The parking proposal would unify on street restrictions around the downtown and the Cumberland Terrace railroad stations by limiting weekday parking on 35 streets to three hours between 10 a.m. and 6 p.m.

The proposal, drafted by City Atty. Robert DiLeonardi, repeals a hodgepodge of ordinance sections banning commuter parking through varying hour restrictions.

The election ordinance calls for opening of polling places from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. April 17 to elect Des Plaines mayor, city clerk, treasurer, aldermen from each of eight wards for four-year terms and a 4th Ward alderman for two years. In 15 pages, the ordinance defines the city's ward and precinct boundaries.

The council also will consider a recommendation from the zoning board of appeals to rezone property at 870 E. Rand Rd. from R-2 single family to C-2 commercial. The petitioner, Robert Journell, of 1605 Barberrry Ln., Mount Prospect, plans construction of a Mazda auto dealership on the property. Journell has contracted to purchase the 5.42 acres from Walker, Stan and Bob Iverson, owners of Iverson Brothers Auto Wreckers, a junk yard on the site.

Mrs. Edfors arraigned for murders

by TONI GINETTI

Shouldered by two court bailiffs as she sat weeping before the bench, Mrs. Elaine Edfors was arraigned Friday on two counts of murder in connection with the bludgeoning deaths of her two daughters three weeks ago.

Associate Judge Anthony J. Scottillo ordered Mrs. Edfors held without bond until a grand jury decides April 24 whether to formally indict her for the murders. A behavior clinic exam for her was also ordered by the judge, with results to be submitted to the grand jury.

The petite, dark-haired woman was found unconscious by her husband Thomas Feb. 26 in their home at 3600 Jay Ln., Rolling Meadows. She was lying near the body of her 9-year-old daughter Debbie and her near-dead 8-year-old daughter Pamela. Pamela died the following day in Evanston Hospital.

Wearing a black leather coat, white skirt and yellow scarf about her neck, the 34-year-old Mrs. Edfors was escorted into the 2nd Circuit Court district courtroom by two women bailiffs. Her hands were manacled behind her back. Her 37-year-old husband sat across the room.

DURING EXAMINATION by the prosecuting attorney, Rolling Meadows Police Sgt. Tim Lonergan told the court he found Mrs. Edfors lying unconscious on her stomach "covered with blood" when he entered the Edfors home the night of the killings. Lonergan said a bloodsoaked straight razor was lying under Mrs. Edfors' right shoulder.

Lonergan, who was the first policeman on the scene, testified he found Debbie lying on her back in a west bedroom of the home "Her head appeared to be caved in and it appeared to me she was dead," Lonergan said.

As Lonergan spoke, Mrs. Edfors broke into sobs and bailiffs grabbed her as she collapsed into a chair. Her husband, who was standing several feet away, turned his head and walked toward a window.

Lonergan then described finding the badly injured Pamela and a hammer police believe was used in the slayings.

In cross-examination, Lonergan testified that he knew Edfors, told the court the only time he had met Mrs. Edfors was on Dec. 7 when he assisted in bringing her to Lutheran General Hospital at her husband's request.

Mrs. Edfors was a patient at the hospital for one week in December.

Edfors said he returned home from work the night of Feb. 26 but could not enter through the front door. He said the door had been blocked by an object inside. Edfors, who spoke softly and appeared to avoid eye contact with his wife, said he called the police when he found his family lying in the home.

A third Edfors youngster, Timmy, 6, was playing at a neighbor's home when the incident occurred, police have said.

During the proceedings Friday, the prosecution entered as evidence 22 photos of the interior of the home taken after the incident as well as the hammer and razor found in the home.

Police have indicated they have letters related to the case but have declined to reveal their contents. Rolling Meadows Police Chief Lewis R. Case said the letters may be made public at a coroner's inquest into the girls' death, which had yet to be scheduled.

3 city candidate appearances slated

Scheduling of three major appearances by city election candidates was announced last week.

Twenty-four candidates for mayor, city clerk, alderman and treasurer have been invited to a Democratic Women's Club candidates night at 8 p.m. Thursday in Oehler's Funeral Home, Perry and Lee streets.

Each candidate will speak for five minutes. "We hope there also is time for a question and answer period," Mrs. Florence Metz, of the club, said.

Plainfield PTA will sponsor an appearance by Des Plaines three mayoral candidates — David Wolf, Mayor Herbert Behrel and Burton Kosmen — and the 5th Ward's aldermanic candidates — Patrick J. O'Donnell, Irene M. Birchfield and Rafael A. DelCampo — at 8 p.m. April 3 at Plainfield School, 1850 Plainfield Dr.

The League of Women Voters will moderate the debate, Mrs. Penny Raczka, of the PTA, said.

The LWV has planned a candidates night from 7 to 10 p.m. April 5 at Casa Royale, 783 Lee St. "There will be no speeches," Mrs. Sue D'Hondt, league president, said. "The candidates will be there for residents to meet them. We're hoping that even incumbents who are not challenged will come."

The city's mayoral candidates will debate at 7:30 p.m. April 8 at Trinity Lutheran Church, 675 Algonquin Rd. The LWV will moderate.

Des Plaines election will be April 17.

many of the students were rebelling."

—Space, parking and noise problems—Koehnline said Oakton is trying to buy two acres of land for parking if it can get approval from the state.

HE SAID the expense of dampening some of the noise in the college's leased former industrial buildings is not warranted. If Oakton, which has been unsuccessful so far in obtaining a permanent campus site, noise reduction measures will be taken, he said.

—Low circulation of library materials and books. Koehnline said the college library is seeking another staff member. He pointed out that many students use local municipal libraries rather than the Oakton library for research.

—Career programs. The team said career education is "off to a good start at Oakton" with some 18 per cent of students enrolled in vocational courses. However, it criticized lack of space, facilities, equipment and "the impression that career education is not really a high priority goal at Oakton."

Koehnline pointed in his response to the college's extensive career counseling and guidance services and emphasized that plans call for adding several new vocational programs in the next four years.

"We are aware of the manpower needs of the (college) district," he said, "and we do not by any means minimize the vastness of the business-industrial complex in the district, much of which is visible on a brief tour."

—Space for student activities and a full-time director of student activities, both found to be needed by the team.

Koehnline acknowledged the space problem and said an activities director would be "premature" at this point in the development of the college, which was opened in 1970.

Koplos' campaign platform: flooding halt, disclosure

Ald. Thomas Koplos (1st) has released a two-point campaign platform.

Koplos, of 535 Bellaire Ave., has called for:

- Elimination of flooding in the 1st Ward and in Des Plaines;
- A city ordinance requiring full disclosure of bank trust and real estate owners seeking zoning changes, variances or special use permits in Des Plaines.

Koplos said "we must intensify and coordinate our efforts locally" to control flooding and he suggested "building more retention basins, complete separation of storm and sanitary sewers, channeling of federal revenue sharing funds into local sewer projects." The city council has approved spending $630,500 in revenue sharing funds for sewer separation, backup valve installation and retention improvement in the city.

The council March 5 referred to the city code and judiciary committee study of Koplos' disclosure proposal.

Thomas
Koplos

"The people demand to know who their neighbors are, especially when asking the Des Plaines zoning board to approve changes that may or may not be to the benefit of the surrounding community affected by the proposed changes," he said.

Non-incumbent 1st Ward candidate is Mary Thomas, 820 Mason Ln.

DAMAGE TO APARTMENTS in the River-Willow Garden Apartments was estimated at $90,000 after a fire broke out in the attic of the building early Saturday. According to Wheeling Fire Chief Bernie Koeppen, most of the damage was caused by smoke and water, with very little resulting from the blaze itself. Firemen from six departments fought the blaze for three hours in high winds and snow.

Wheeling area apartment fire

Five families homeless

Five families left homeless by a fire early Saturday morning at 918 Old Willow Rd. in unincorporated Wheeling Township owe a great deal to their neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. William Senecal. Wheeling Fire Chief Bernie Koeppen credited the Senecals with getting residents of the burning apartment building out alive.

The fire was discovered around 3 a.m. by Mrs. Senecal who said she was awakened by what sounded like someone throwing rocks at her bedroom window. She said when she looked out the window she could see sparks from the fire in the adjoining building of the River-Willow

Garden Apartments.

"I WOKE UP my husband and told him to call the fire department, and then I got dressed and ran over to the building to wake up the people," she said. "I met a boy who helped my husband and I wake up the residents."

The boy, about 19, was not identified. Senecal said to his knowledge no one knew of the fire since it was in the attic of the building. He said there was very little smoke in the building while he was waking residents.

When told that Koeppen credited them with saving the lives of residents in the building, the Senecals said, "We did

what we had to do."

The fire, which caused an estimated $90,000 damage, lasted about three hours. Firemen from Wheeling, Buffalo Grove, Mount Prospect, Prospect Heights, Northbrook and the Glenview rural fire protection district battled the flames in high winds and snow. Firemen from the Vernon Township Fire Department stood by at the Wheeling Fire Station.

THE EARLY morning blaze was contained in the upper area of the building.

Koeppen, who directed the fire fighting with chiefs from Northbrook and Glenview, said the ceiling of the building prevented the fire from spreading. He said that while the cause of the fire is undetermined, officials believe it started in the attic above the second floor laundry room because that was where the heaviest damage occurred.

Residents from surrounding apartments, the Salvation Army and the Red Cross aided the homeless residents and provided food and coffee for the more than 70 fire fighters at the scene.

Owners of the apartment complex were reportedly finding other apartments for the homeless victims.

Suburban teachers to attend live-in workshop outdoors

Northwest suburban teachers will be going to school in a forest preserve this spring during three live-in workshops on outdoor education held at Camp Sagawau near Lemont.

Teachers from schools in Cook and other counties will attend the sessions designed to help the teachers plan ecology programs for their students.

The workshops, which will be held between April 25 and May 25, will include both three-day and five-day sessions.

Camp Sagawau is an adult conservation education center sponsored by the Cook County Forest Preserve District.

The three-day workshops are geared to study of geology and geography, plant identification and pond studies. The teachers will concentrate on nature awareness activities, identifying plants, study of local soils, exploring the camp's limestone waterway and prairie restoration project, observing weather demonstrations, and gathering materials for classroom exhibits in a terrarium or aquarium.

The teachers also will participate in optional bird-watching hikes, fossil collecting and plaster-casting.

The five-day workshops concentrate on socio-economic aspects of geology and soils, on climate and on plant relationships in this area.

The effects of water pollution and waste disposal on the environment and a discussion of pond and marsh ecology and fisheries management is also included in the course.

The workshop also includes techniques for studying animal and human populations.

Information on registering for the workshops is available by calling Mrs. Bette Prueter at FO 9-9420.

New post office a possibility if proposal OKd

Elk Grove Village may get a new post office if the U.S. Postal Service approves a proposal by the village Association of

Mosquito aid pledged by business group

The Elk Grove Village Association of Industry and Commerce has committed itself to help the village fight the mosquito invasion expected in the Northwest suburbs this summer.

Drainage ditches in the industrial park are a perfect breeding ground for mosquitoes, and association members say they will work with the village to clean the ditches of all debris and maintain them. Stan Klyber, association director, said a committee from the association will meet with village officials to discuss a program for cleaning the trenches.

"We have discussed cleaning and possibly tilling and covering the ditches, but no definite plan of action has been made," he said.

Klyber said the directors of the association have met with Wilbur Mitchell, director of the Northwest Mosquito Abatement District, and they also will work with the abatement district to combat the mosquito problem.

"Standing water is the prime problem, and weeds on vacant property sometimes hide standing water where the mosquitoes breed," Klyber said. He said that under the village health ordinance, the village can require owners to maintain vacant land, and he felt this regulation will be enforced more in the future.

KLYBER SAID the association directors also have voiced support for a proposed ordinance that would allow spraying of mosquitoes in all parts of the village. Currently the mosquito abatement district lacks authority to spray on private property without the owner's permission.

Besides being unpleasant, mosquitoes can cause an economic loss to companies, he said. "Last year several plants with night shifts had to close down because the mosquitoes were so bad they were affecting their employees," he said.

Klyber added that some plants last summer called the mosquito abatement district for special spraying because of the severe problem in the area. "Mosquitoes cost the businesses money last year in terms of lost time and production," he said.

At a meeting last month between village officials and representatives from the Northwest Mosquito Abatement District, Mitchell said there were 45 miles of weed and cat-tail-choked ditches for breeding mosquitoes in the industrial park alone. He said if conditions were right to hatch the millions of mosquito eggs laid during last year's heavy rains, this summer could see one of the worst mosquito problems ever.

Elk Grove Village trustees are planning to purchase spraying equipment this spring to augment the abatement district's fight against mosquitoes.

Industry and Commerce to build a new facility.

"A half-million pieces of mail are sent out of Elk Grove Village daily, and the present post office is not big enough or capable of handling this volume of mail," Stan Klyber, association director, said last week. "There is a critical need for additional space."

He said, "If we can get better mail service for Elk Grove Village, it will benefit everyone in the village — businessmen and residents."

Klyber said members of the association met last month with Stanley Rakowski, section manager for 110 post offices in Northwest Illinois. At that time Rakowski said he would look into rearranging the transportation schedule so incoming mail would go directly to Elk Grove Village from the distribution points instead of going through Arlington Heights first, Klyber said.

CURRENTLY incoming and outgoing mail passes through the Arlington Heights center.

"Rakowski is aware of our acute problem with delays in the mail service in the village," Klyber said. "We understand the post office is going through changes in organization at this time, and we hope some of those changes will happen in Elk Grove."

Klyber said the postal official asked the association to indicate possible sites in the village for a new mail facility, and a list of a number of sites has been submitted. Klyber said the proposal must next go to the service's real estate department.

BUSINESSMEN are complaining that delays in the mail service are causing them problems in receiving, filling orders and sending out invoices. "There have been cases in which it took two or three days to get a letter from the village to Chicago," Klyber said.

Klyber said that to have mail processed the same day, mail must be at the local post office in the Grove shopping center, Arlington Heights and Biesterfeld roads, by 5 p.m. He said most offices close at 5 p.m. and mail going out at the end of the day is not handled until the following day.

It is much too early to talk about any timetable for a new post office, but more direct mail service is definitely needed in the village, Klyber said.

Railroad worker, 45, crushed by boxcars

William Dennis, 45, of Rosemont, was in serious condition yesterday in the intensive care unit at Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village, with injuries from a railroad accident last week.

Dennis was crushed between two boxcars Thursday while working at the Chicago and North Western Ry. yard at 2511 Pratt Blvd. in the village.

Hospital officials said his spine, left and right ribs were fractured, and he had a ruptured bladder, punctured right lung and other multiple injuries.

IT ISN'T REALLY a "car" wash for grocery carts — in fact, Elk Grove Village officials are trying to get rid of the water that has accumulated in the Grove Shopping Center lot at Biesterfeld and Arlington Heights roads. Meanwhile, it's a good place to ride a bike and occasionally in, if a fellow

Federal officials also seek restrictions

Manufacturer urges curbs on drug

by KAREN BLECHA

A Mount Prospect drug manufacturer has joined with federal officials in urging stricter controls over the sale, distribution and prescription of methaqualone, a widely used sedative.

But officials of Arnar-Stone Laboratories Inc., one of the five United States companies making the drug, do not want controls as restrictive as those advocated by federal legislators. Legislators, the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) and the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs (BNDD) want to restrict the production of the drug and prohibit refillable prescriptions.

The sleep-inducing drug is prescribed for cases of insomnia but has also been used by persons without prescription. A large amount of the drug was stolen from Arnar-Stone, 601 E. Kensington Rd., two years ago and illegally sold to teens in the area and in Chicago.

DR. JOHN ZAROSLINSKI, vice president of Arnar-Stone's research department, said Friday the company is not concerned about the possibility of a quota restriction.

"But we are concerned about the patient who has legitimate use for the drug. We think to prohibit refillable prescriptions would place undue hardships on patients who need it for therapeutic use. I don't think anyone has spoken up for that person yet," he said.

Dr. Zaroslinski said Arnar-Stone has written to the FDA urging them to place methaqualone, currently not federally controlled, under the same controls as barbiturates. This would mean prescriptions for the drug could be refilled five times in six months. Manufacturers of the pill would also have to keep records of whom they sell the substance to.

Federal officials want the drug placed in the same class as cocaine, morphine, codeine, methadone, methamphetamine and amphetamine. Bills have been introduced in the U.S. House of Representatives and the Senate urging inclusion of methaqualone in this class, which would subject the drug to more rigid security.

If a bill is passed, the BNDD would be allowed to set production quotas, prohibit refillable prescriptions, prohibit exportation or importation without BNDD authority, and prohibit the sale or purchase of the drug from a manufacturer without a federal order form.

METHAQUALONE, sold by Arnar-Stone under the trade name Sopor, works as a depressant on the central nervous system and affects the center of the brain, which controls sleep.

According to BNDD, distribution of the drug has jumped 1,500 per cent in the past four years, from 8 million dosage units in 1968 to 147 million dosage units in 1972. "Abuse of the drug methaqualone in a 16-month period has resulted in 53 suicides and 313 overdoses," Robert J. Rosenthal, BNDD deputy chief counsel, said.

Roger Cain, executive director of the Illinois Pharmaceutical Association, said, "Methaqualone is in a category of drugs that are depressants. And any drug that is a depressant is a habit-forming drug — a physically addicting drug."

He added that the addiction is reversible. Although the drug has been promoted as a safe alternative to barbiturates, the BNDD said a study has shown such promotion "is totally inaccurate."

DR. ZAROSLINSKI said there are benefits to those who use the drug for legitimate therapy. "It has been used all over the world in various cases of in-sonnia," said Zarosinski. He said Annar-Stone has marketed the drug for several years. "It is a very useful drug; it does not produce side effects. It is particularly suited to the elderly."

The Economic Stabilization Act, which gave the President authority to issue Phase I and Phase II wage and price controls, expires April 30. The administration wants the authorization extended for another year although Phase III depends largely on voluntary guidelines.

Dr. Zarosinski said overdoses of the drug, as with any drug, can cause death. An overdose of methaqualone is believed to have caused the recent death of David Whiting, business manager of actress Sarah Miles.

Methaqualone has been popular with teenagers because it is more readily available than are the federally controlled barbiturates, according to Dr. Zarosinski. "This is why we have urged the government to try to stop the misuse of methaqualone," he said.

Zarosinski said Annar-Stone has tightened its security since a break-in earlier this year in which a small amount of Sopor was taken. Burglars also netted a small amount of the drug during a similar break-in last fall.

In April, 1971, 48,000 of the pills were stolen from the laboratories. Some of the pills were found in the possession of area teens and some were found in Chicago. The stolen drug had been distributed at a local dance, police said.

Police unit president suspended

Patrolman William Spyryson, president of the Des Plaines chapter of the Combined Counties Police Association (CCPA), was suspended for three days without pay last week on charges of insubordination.

The suspension came Thursday after Spyryson refused to send a routine memo to Police Chief Arthur Hintz indicating that he had reported late for his 3 p.m. to midnight shift.

Spyryson said he refused to send the memo because he had originally called in sick that day but later agreed to report when he was told there would be a shortage of patrolmen on duty.

Current contract negotiations between the city and CCPA will not be affected by the incident, said Spyryson, a member of the CCPA bargaining team.

The matter had been turned over to the city's board of police and fire commissioners who will decide whether Spyryson will be paid for the three days. No hearing date has been set by the board.

96 bags of flour stolen from warehouse

Some 96 bags of flour, valued at $1,000, were stolen sometime last week from a warehouse at 2311 Touhy Ave., Elk Grove Village. Police said Edmund Burke, Barrington, owner of the warehouse, told them the flour might have been taken to a bakery in Chicago.

Home theft reported

Between $150 and $180 in cash and a jade ring were stolen Saturday from the home of Bonnie Kocelowski, 529 Yarmouth Rd., Elk Grove Village. Police said the burglars entered the home by prying open the screen door of the rear porch.

Lucas said the purpose of the caucus could be to encourage candidacy or give specific endorsement of candidates.

That decision will be made by representatives of organizations that seek a voice on the committee.

Lucas said each civic or educational organization that asks to be included in the caucus will be allowed one voting member, but anyone can attend as a non-voting observer.

A donation of $1 per voting member is asked to defray mailing costs, said Lucas.

Decision on unit district plan consultant delayed

A decision on hiring a consultant for the Schaumburg Unit School District Feasibility Study Committee was delayed Friday until members of the group can discuss their plans with representatives of Schaumburg Township Elementary Dist. 54.

The meeting between representatives of the two groups is Wednesday.

The committee received three proposals Friday from consultants offering to complete the proposed feasibility study. The proposals came from Midwest Educational Consultants, Illinois School Consultants and Northern Illinois University.

After reviewing the three proposals, the committee agreed to delay accepting any of the proposals until after discussing the study with Dist. 54 officials.

The committee did agree, however, not to request funds from the school district.

It is possible for the school district to obtain a grant up to $3,500 from the Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction for such a study.

The bids submitted by the consultants were Midwest Educational Consultants, $5,000 plus expenses, Illinois School Consultants, $16,000 and Northern Illinois University, $5,500.

Richard A. Belnap, professor of education at NIU, submitted the proposal for the school's College of Education.

The committee also voted to add Lorraine Olsen, of 4 W. Weathersfield Way, Schaumburg, to fill a vacancy on the committee.

Mrs. Olsen has lived in Schaumburg for four years and has been active in the Lancer Park Homeowners Association. She is an insurance rater for the Aetna Insurance Co.

James Guidotti, who announced his withdrawal from the Dist. 54 board of education race, also was named to the committee.

'News blackout' for salary talks

A news blackout will prevail throughout teacher contract negotiations that began last week in Schaumburg Township School Dist. 54, said Gordon Thoren, board of education negotiating team chairman.

Thoren in answer to questions about the first negotiation session, told the Herald "we met; there will be no comments."

Asked if the no comment statement applied to just this first ground rules meeting, Thoren said there would be no comment throughout the negotiation.

This year both teachers and board of education negotiations teams have the help of professional spokesmen. Chicago attorney Marvin Glink represents the board of education team. Dave Tomcheck, Illinois Education Association regional director, represents the Schaumburg Education Association, bargaining for the teachers.

4 juveniles seized in vandalism case

Four juveniles have been arrested in connection with vandalism last week at Elk Grove High School. Police said 17 windows were broken with rocks and metal bolts, including six windows in the school library. School officials estimated the damage at more than $1,300.

DAMAGE TO APARTMENTS in the River-Willow Garden Apartments was estimated at $90,000 after a fire broke out in the attic of the building early Saturday. According to Wheeling Fire Chief Bernie Koeppen, most of the damage was caused by smoke and water, with very little resulting from the blaze itself. Firemen from six departments fought the blaze for three hours in high winds and snow.

Wheeling area apartment fire

Five families homeless

Five families left homeless by a fire early Saturday morning at 916 Old Willow Rd. in unincorporated Wheeling Township owe a great deal to their neighbors. Mr. and Mrs. William Senecal, Wheeling Fire Chief Bernie Koeppen credited the Senecals with getting residents of the burning apartment building out alive.

The fire was discovered around 3 a.m. by Mrs. Senecal who said she was awakened by what sounded like someone throwing rocks at her bedroom window. She said when she looked out the window she could see sparks from the fire in the adjoining building of the River-Willow

Garden Apartments.

"I WOKE UP my husband and told him to call the fire department, and then I got dressed and ran over to the building to wake up the people," she said. "I met a boy who helped my husband and I wake up the residents."

The boy, about 19, was not identified. Senecal said to his knowledge no one knew of the fire since it was in the attic of the building. He said there was very little smoke in the building while he was waking residents.

When told that Koeppen credited them with saving the lives of residents in the building, the Senecals said, "We did

what we had to do."

The fire, which caused an estimated $90,000 damage, lasted about three hours. Firemen from Wheeling, Buffalo Grove, Mount Prospect, Prospect Heights, Northbrook and the Glenview rural fire protection district battled the flames in high winds and snow. Firemen from the Vernon Township Fire Department stood by at the Wheeling Fire Station.

THE EARLY morning blaze was contained in the upper area of the building.

Koeppen, who directed the fire fighting with chiefs from Northbrook and Glenview, said the ceiling of the building prevented the fire from spreading. He said that while the cause of the fire is undetermined, officials believe it started in the attic above the second floor laundry room because that was where the heaviest damage occurred.

Residents from surrounding apartments, the Salvation Army and the Red Cross aided the homeless residents and provided food and coffee for the more than 70 fire fighters at the scene.

Owners of the apartment complex were reportedly finding other apartments for the homeless victims.

Suburban teachers to attend live-in workshop outdoors

Northwest suburban teachers will be going to school in a forest preserve this spring during three live-in workshops on outdoor education held at Camp Sagawau near Lemont.

Teachers from schools in Cook and other counties will attend the sessions designed to help the teachers plan ecology programs for their students.

The workshops, which will be held between April 25 and May 25, will include both three-day and five-day sessions.

Camp Sagawau is an adult conservation education center sponsored by the Cook County Forest Preserve District.

The three-day workshops are geared to study of geology and geography, plant identification and pond studies. The teachers will concentrate on nature awareness activities, identifying plants, study of local soils, exploring the camp's limestone waterway and prairie restoration project, observing weather demonstrations, and gathering materials for classroom exhibits in a terrarium or aquarium.

The teachers also will participate in optional bird-watching hikes, fossil collecting and plaster-casting.

The five-day workshops concentrate on socio-economic aspects of geology and soils, on climate and on plant relationships in this area.

Scofflaws ignoring sump pump 'prohibition'

by MARCIA KRAMER
Bert Braun likens it to prohibition. "People don't accept the idea that what they're doing is illegal or improper," the Palatine village manager says. "What 'they're' doing is connecting basement sump pumps to laundry tubs, which drain into the sanitary sewer system. It's an illegal procedure, and one which is a primary cause of raw sewage backups into basements during heavy storms. And, like prohibition, the village is virtually powerless to effectively enforce the law. The law is an ordinance passed last October by the Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD) requiring municipalities to inspect and eliminate sources of stormwater entry into the sanitary system. THE PROBLEM, according to Braun, is the village has no legal right to enter homes to check for illegal hook-ups to the sanitary sewers, and many homeowners simply refuse to admit an inspector. Besides that, an illegal connection is "not a complicated kind of thing where you need a building permit or heavy equipment," Braun pointed out. Thus, even if the homeowner agrees to remove the connection, it's a simple matter to restore it after the inspector leaves. All of which leaves the village in the awkward position of being virtually unable to effectively enforce the MSD ordinance. "I honestly don't know what we're supposed to do," said Braun. When the village attempted on its own initiative three years ago to check some 700 homes for illegal sewer connections, "only the ones that had legal connections" opened their doors to the inspectors. Braun says he has no way of knowing just how many illegal sump pump connections exist in the village. BUT YOU CAN tell they're around whenever sewage starts backing up into basements. It's caused by storm water being fed into the sewage system by illegal hookups. The system becomes filled to capacity, and during heavy storms begins backing up into the homes with the lowest elevation. "It's a serious kind of problem," Braun says. "There's no reason in the world why people should have to put up with sewage backups." So why are illegal connections made? Simple: "People don't want water pumped into their back yards." The sump pumps in each home dump the excess water just behind the house, making for what homeowners say is a soggy rear yard. Some homeowners add an extension hose to the sump pump to get the water away from the house. While legal, it sometimes brings complaints from neighbors whose yards become saturated. The best method of eliminating illegal sump pump connections, according to Braun, "ought to be people recognizing it's in everybody's best interest to abide by the regulations." But because of the prohibition-type attitude toward the regulations, this solution isn't likely to come about. ANOTHER ALTERNATIVE, providing larger sewer systems to handle the storm water, wouldn't be allowed by MSD. Besides, Braun points out, that would defeat the purpose of the separate storm water and sewage systems. "I'm not pooh-poohing the MSD regulation," he said. "It's basically sound and reasonable." The village's problem lies in figuring out a way to eliminate illegal hook-ups by next Jan. 1, or face possible legal action by the sanitary district. And in the meantime, the village is to keep MSD informed of its progress with quarterly reports, the first due April 1. It's a case, says Braun, of "local government getting caught in the middle." The sanitary district "will admit there's no good way to enforce the ordinance, and they will admit there are legal complications involved (in obtaining access to homes to inspect for illegal connections). But they'll still come to the conclusion: 'That's your problem, not ours.'"

Fires damage two homes in Palatine during weekend

Fires gutted two homes in Palatine this weekend, including the home of a Palatine policeman.

Damaged in a blaze Saturday afternoon was the home of Officer Howard Wurster, 86 E. Illinois Ave. Palatine Fire Chief Orville Helms said yesterday the fire began in a second floor closet of the two-story frame home and spread to an adjoining bedroom. Helms said the Wurster family was home at the time of the incident but escaped injury. No cause has been determined.

A fire yesterday shortly before noon caused extensive damage to the home of Doris Johnson, 536 Stuart Ln. Helms said the fire started in the basement of the two-story home and spread from the basement up the walls and floors to the kitchen area.

Heavy smoke damage was done to the kitchen and basement of the home, Helms said. No one was injured in the fire.

A cause has not yet been determined, Helms said, but it is believed the fire may have started in a clothes dryer in the basement of the home.

An investigation into the causes of both fires will be made, Helms said.

Damage estimates were not immediately available from the department.

Helms said no outside assistance was required to combat either blaze and that firemen were able to bring both fires under control within 30 minutes.

Village gets $9,100 for new ambulance

Palatine has been awarded a $9,100 federal grant to help provide the fire department with a new ambulance.

The grant, based on a matching sum from the village, will be used for a fully-equipped vehicle.

The Illinois Department of Transportation approved the village's application for funds, which are available to the state through the Federal Highway Safety Act.

Firemen's funds to go for education

The $28,000 donated to funds established in memory of the three Palatine men killed in a fire last month will be used for the education of the victims' children.

The decision was tentatively reached at a meeting last week of a 15-member citizens committee set up to oversee the contributions.

Industry Inc., said it was the wishes of the volunteer firemen's windows that the money be put in a trust fund for the children's education.

AN ADDITIONAL $2,500 donated to a fund set up by Palatine American Legion Post 690, is being given directly to the families.

Some $414 will be turned over to the paramedic fund, at the request of the donors.

An additional $3,100 contributed by Inverness residents is expected to be given to the families.

Killed while fighting a fire which destroyed the Ben Franklin store in downtown Palatine Feb. 23 were Warren H. Ahlgrim, 357 W. Michigan Ave.; Richard H. Freeman, 22 S. Glenwood Ave.; and John T. Wilson, 250 E. Colfax St. Wilson was the owner of the store.

THEIR CHILDREN, who will share in the educational trust fund, are Pamela Ahlgrim, 14, and David Ahlgrim, 8; Christopher Freeman, 4, and Tracey Freeman, 16 months; and Stephen Wilson, 13, Deborah Wilson, 11, and Linda Wilson, 8.

This Morning In Brief

The nation

Critics of President Nixon's Phase III economic policies plan to offer tough anti-inflation amendments when the wage-price control bill comes before the Senate today. The Economic Stabilization Act, which gave the President authority to issue Phase I and Phase II wage and price controls, expires April 30. The administration wants the authorization extended for another year although Phase III depends largely on voluntary guidelines.

Militant Indians occupying Wounded Knee, S.D. booted a new government proposal asking them to lay down their arms and submit peacefully to arrest. There has been no formal response by American Indian Movement leaders to the proposal. Many have vowed to die rather than surrender.

A stick of dynamite exploded near a Denver, Colo. police substation and a Molotov cocktail hit a community relations storefront a day after battles between police and snipers left one man dead and 19 injured. Mexican-American leaders in Denver say police used excessive action in breaking into apartments and making wholesale arrests.

Twenty-five school children had to be evacuated from a northern Indiana farmhouse where they had been stranded since Saturday when their school bus became bogged down in deep snow while returning from a field trip. Three National Guard helicopters were sent in and other copters were used to reach motorists stranded in drifts across the northeast section of the state.

Thousands of residents in Tennessee,

Alabama and Mississippi were left homeless by torrential rains that spawned the worst flooding in the region in nearly half a century. Damage estimates ranged in the millions of dollars. Six persons were killed in weather-related accidents, four in Tennessee and two in Alabama.

The world

Communist rebels unleashed rocket attacks on the suburbs of Phnom Penh, capital of Cambodia, shortly before celebrations of the third anniversary of Prince Norodom Sihanouk's overthrow were to begin. The prince's mother and eight other members of the royal family were placed under arrest after Saturday's bombing attack on the presidential palace by his son-in-law. Despite the attacks thousands of Cambodians sang and danced in the streets.

Ten bombings, 25 shootings and a landmine explosion killed at least two persons in 24 hours in Belfast, giving blood-soaked Ireland its worst weekend in months. The explosion of a bomb-laden car outside a border pub killed a man in the car and slightly injured 25 persons attending a St. Patrick's Day celebration.

The dollar will be on its own today when European and Japanese money markets reopen and the "dirty float" worked out by 14 finance ministers takes effect, putting the value of the American currency at the mercy of supply and demand. Most ministers hope the market value of the dollar will be about the same as when it was at a fixed rate.

GOP sponsoring fund-raiser

The Palatine Township Regular Republican Organization will sponsor a fund-raising dance Friday night at the Elks Club, 2323 N. Wilke Rd., Arlington Heights.

The 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. dance will feature a buffet and the music of the Combo Counts orchestra.

Tickets, at $8 a person, are available by calling 359-5521.

Park election absentee ballots ready Monday

Absentee ballots will be available starting today for qualified residents of the Palatine Park District for the April 3 park district election.

Two incumbents, Paul Jensen and James Jones, are running unopposed for six-year terms as park commissioners.

A notary public will be on duty at the park district office, 262 E. Palatine Rd., to process the absentee ballots from 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 2-4 p.m. on weekdays. In addition, the absentee ballots will also be available Saturday, March 31, when the notary public will be on duty from noon to 4 p.m.

Voters who cannot cast an absentee ballot in person may mail an affidavit requesting the ballot.

On election day April 3, the polling place at the administration building will be open from 6 a.m. to 8 p.m. for voters.

6 illegal immigrants apprehended by cops

Arlington Heights Police have turned six Chicago-area residents over to the United States Immigration and Naturalization Service in Chicago when they discovered they had entered the country illegally.

Among those held are: Mario Corral, Ascencion Chavez Vargas, Estaban Medina, all of 2707 Rohlfing Rd., Palatine, and Baldomero Corral of Chicago. The names and addresses of the other two were unavailable.

Police discovered the immigrants while investigating the death of Francisco Garcia Medina, Chicago, a house man at the Arlington Park Tower Hotel who was found last week injured in the hotel's parking lot. He died later that week from either an injury sustained from an epileptic seizure or a beating.

The six were friends of Medina who have been living in Palatine for about three months. Baldomero Corral has been living at the Medina residence, according to police records.

The immigration service will arrange for their deportation to Mexico.

Inverness may get (costly) townhouses

The Village of Inverness may finally be the home of multiple dwellings, but not of the normal suburban variety. Townhouses and condominiums planned for the affluent community will sell for $75,000 to $100,000 a unit.

Compromise and the prospect of a lengthy court battle prompted Inverness officials last week to give conditional approval for the first condominiums and townhouses ever built within the village limits.

The 40-acre site on Roselle Road near Harper College will be constructed with 304 housing units built in a variety of townhouses, condominiums and midrise buildings.

A planned unit development ordinance must first be approved by the village before Lonz's development can be officially accepted. Village officials are expected to approve such an ordinance at their April meeting.

A PLANNED-UNIT development requires developers to detail their project, then construct it without changing those details. The ordinance gives the village greater control over proposed developments.

Owned by Inverness resident Robert Lonz, the land has been considered for higher-density development for the past 18 months. Until the recent compromise with the village board, Lonz was attempting to withdraw his property from village boundaries in hopes of getting a higher-density zoning through the Cook County zoning board.

Lonz's petition to withdraw from the village was denied early last year. A lawsuit followed, which resulted in the Circuit Court allowing Lonz to pull out of the Inverness boundaries.

While village officials began proceedings for an appeal, negotiations continued to find some compromise that would allow Lonz to build his higher-density units and still remain in the village.

Density was a major problem. When Lonz first began planning, he told village officials that he wanted to build about 15 units per acre. Those officials countered that six to nine units might be agreeable. The number finally settled on in the recent plans allow 7.6 units per acre.

A VILLAGE comprehensive plan adopted in January recommends that Lonz's property be developed with six units per acre.

Inverness will get the tax benefits by keeping the plush development in the village. And Lonz or the developer will be able to start construction soon. If the appeal had been allowed to continue through the courts, a decision may not have come for one to two years, Village Atty. J. William Braithwaite estimated.

Taller buildings will be built on the southern and central portions of the property, while the portion near other land developed with single family homes will have lower buildings.

Palatine-Rolling Meadows School Dist. 15 will be receiving a donation of $5,000 from the Inverness developer.

Mrs. Edfors arraigned for daughters' murders

by TONI GINETTI

Shouldered by two court bailiffs as she sat weeping before the bench, Mrs. Elaine Edfors was arraigned Friday on two counts of murder in connection with the bludgeoning deaths of her two daughters three weeks ago.

Associate Judge Anthony J. Scodillo ordered Mrs. Edfors held without bond until a grand jury decides April 24 whether to formally indict her for the murders. A behavior clinic exam for her was also ordered by the judge, with results to be submitted to the grand jury.

The petite, dark-haired woman was found unconscious by her husband Thomas Feb. 26 in their home at 3600 Jay Ln., Rolling Meadows. She was lying near the body of her 9-year-old daughter Debbie and her near-dead 8-year-old daughter Pamela. Pamela died the following day in Evanston Hospital.

Wearing a black leather coat, white shirt and yellow scarf about her neck, the 34-year-old Mrs. Edfors was escorted into the 2nd Circuit Court district courtroom by two women bailiffs. Her hands were manacled behind her back. Her 37-year-old husband sat across the room.

DURING EXAMINATION by the prosecuting attorney, Rolling Meadows Police Sgt. Tim Lonergan told the court he found Mrs. Edfors lying unconscious on her stomach "covered with blood" when he entered the Edfors home the night of the killings. Lonergan said a bloodsoaked straight razor was lying under Mrs. Edfors' right shoulder.

Lonergan, who was the first policeman on the scene, testified he found Debbie lying on her back in a west bedroom of the home. "Her head appeared to be caved in and it appeared to me she was dead," Lonergan said.

As Lonergan spoke, Mrs. Edfors broke into sobs and bailiffs grabbed her as she collapsed into a chair. Her husband, who was standing several feet away, turned his head and walked toward a window.

Lonergan then described finding the badly injured Pamela and a hammer police believe was used in the slayings.

In cross-examination, Lonergan testified that he knew Edfors, told the court the only time he had met Mrs. Edfors was on Dec. 7 when he assisted in bringing her to Lutheran General Hospital at her husband's request.

Mrs. Edfors was a patient at the hospital for one week in December.

IN TESTIMONY he gave the court, Edfors said he returned home from work the night of Feb. 26 but could not enter through the front door. He said the door had been blocked by an object inside. Edfors, who spoke softly and appeared to avoid eye contact with his wife, said he called the police when he found his family lying in the home.

A third Edfors youngster, Timmy, 6, was playing at a neighbor's home when the incident occurred, police have said.

During the proceedings Friday, the prosecution entered as evidence 22 photos of the interior of the home taken after the incident as well as the hammer and razor found in the home.

Police have indicated they have letters related to the case but have declined to reveal their contents. Rolling Meadows Police Chief Lewis R. Case said the letters may be made public at a coroner's inquest into the girls' death, which had yet to be scheduled.

Sixth hopeful files in high school race

A sixth candidate has filed for election to the High School Dist. 211 board of education.

John Heuman, 31, of 170 Heather Ln., Hoffman Estates, filed Friday for one of the two-year terms on the board that will be filled in the April 14 election. Heuman, a resident of the district for 3½ years, is a teacher at Maine South High School in Park Ridge.

Heuman said he is running for the board because "I think school boards will be better off with an educator on them. On the board now there are no teachers."

In addition, Heuman said, "I think the district has been providing a quality education, but I think it could provide more quality education. The board has spent a lot of time on their building program — bricks and mortar — and I think education could be more of a priority than it has been."

Five other candidates have already filed for the two board seats, including incumbent board Pres. Robert Creek. Other candidates are Diane Marks, Robert, Weseman, Orland Vangness and Edward Perry.

Filing for the board election will continue through March 23 at the Dist. 211 administration building, 1750 S. Roselle Rd., Palatine.

Wheeling area apartment fire

Five families homeless

Five families left homeless by a fire early Saturday morning at 916 Old Willow Rd. in unincorporated Wheeling Township owe a great deal to their neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. William Senecal. Wheeling Fire Chief Bernie Koeppen credited the Senecals with getting residents of the burning apartment building out alive.

The fire was discovered around 3 a.m. by Mrs. Senecal who said she was awakened by what sounded like someone throwing rocks at her bedroom window. She said when she looked out the window she could see sparks from the fire in the adjoining building of the River-Willow

Garden Apartments.

"I WOKE UP my husband and told him to call the fire department, and then I got dressed and ran over to the building to wake up the people," she said. "I met a boy who helped my husband and I wake up the residents."

The boy, about 19, was not identified. Senecal said to his knowledge no one knew of the fire since it was in the attic of the building. He said there was very little smoke in the building while he was waking residents.

When told that Koeppen credited them with saving the lives of residents in the building, the Senecals said, "We did

what we had to do."

The fire, which caused an estimated $90,000 damage, lasted about three hours. Firemen from Wheeling, Buffalo Grove, Mount Prospect, Prospect Heights, Northbrook and the Glenview rural fire protection district battled the flames in high winds and snow. Firemen from the Vernon Township Fire Department stood by at the Wheeling Fire Station.

THE EARLY morning blaze was contained in the upper area of the building.

Koeppen, who directed the fire fighting with chiefs from Northbrook and Glenview, said the ceiling of the building prevented the fire from spreading. He said that while the cause of the fire is undetermined, officials believe it started in the attic above the second floor laundry room because that was where the heaviest damage occurred.

Residents from surrounding apartments, the Salvation Army and the Red Cross aided the homeless residents and provided food and coffee for the more than 70 fire fighters at the scene.

Owners of the apartment complex were reportedly finding other apartments for the homeless victims.

Suburban teachers to attend live-in workshop outdoors

Northwest suburban teachers will be going to school in a forest preserve this spring during three live-in workshops on outdoor education held at Camp Sagawau near Lemont.

Teachers from schools in Cook and other counties will attend the sessions designed to help the teachers plan ecology programs for their students.

The workshops, which will be held between April 25 and May 25, will include both three-day and five-day sessions.

Camp Sagawau is an adult conservation education center sponsored by the Cook County Forest Preserve District.

The three-day workshops are geared to study of geology and geography, plant identification and pond studies. The teachers will concentrate on nature awareness activities, identifying plants, study of local soils, exploring the camp's limestone waterway and prairie restoration project, observing weather demonstrations, and gathering materials for classroom exhibits in a terrarium or aquarium.

The teachers also will participate in optional bird-watching hikes, fossil collecting and plaster-casting.

The five-day workshops concentrate on socio-economic aspects of geology and soils, on climate and on plant relationships in this area.

Changing weather has prompted a wobbly transition from ice skates to roller skates.

Officials still aren't sure

Does city need blood bank program?

Rolling Meadows officials have not yet decided whether to pursue efforts to start a citywide blood bank program.

A survey of city employees taken last month to determine whether the program could generate sufficient participation to support itself produced only limited response, according to Board of Health Pres. Kenneth Johnson.

Johnson said Friday only about 25 responses of 28 questionnaires returned were positive. "It's an awfully small return to go on considering they didn't have to go far to return them," (the questionnaires) Johnson said.

"I merely wrote up the results and sent them to the mayor," Johnson said. "We'll wait to see what the city council wants to do now."

MAYOR ROLAND Meyer said last week since the survey's results were inconclusive, he did not know what action the council might take. Before presenting the survey to the council, however, Meyer said he "will be talking to the department heads on how they feel about it."

The survey of city employees was seen as a preliminary step to determining whether a blood banking program for residents of the city would be supported. Participation in a blood program was first discussed in October when a representative from the Red Cross spoke before the board of health to describe that organization's program.

The program would provide unlimited blood to participants and their families if four units of blood per 100 residents of the city is contributed each year of the program.

Similar programs have been successful in Arlington Heights and Palatine.

During a board of health meeting last month, Johnson indicated he did not think sufficient interest had been generated by city employees to warrant participation in a blood program. He said blood banking programs might be unnecessary in the near future should hospitals adopt the use of frozen blood, which can be stored for indefinite periods to reduce the chances of shortages.

This Morning In Brief

The nation

Critics of President Nixon's Phase III economic policies plan to offer tough anti-inflation amendments when the wage-price control bill comes before the Senate today. The Economic Stabilization Act, which gave the President authority to issue Phase I and Phase II wage and price controls, expires April 30. The administration wants the authorization extended for another year although Phase III depends largely on voluntary guidelines.

Millitant Indians occupying Wounded Knee, S.D. boomed a new government proposal asking them to lay down their arms and submit peacefully to arrest. There has been no formal response by American Indian Movement leaders to the proposal. Many have vowed to die rather than surrender.

A stick of dynamite exploded near a Denver, Colo. police substation and a Molotov cocktail hit a community relations storefront a day after battles between police and snipers left one man dead and 19 injured. Mexican-American leaders in Denver say police used excessive action in breaking into apartments and making wholesale arrests.

Twenty-five school children had to be evacuated from a northern Indiana farmhouse where they had been stranded since Saturday when their school bus became bogged down in deep snow while returning from a field trip. Three National Guard helicopters were sent in and other copters were used to reach motorists stranded in drifts across the north-east section of the state.

Thousands of residents in Tennessee,

Alabama and Mississippi were left homeless by torrential rains that spawned the worst flooding in the region in nearly half a century. Damage estimates ranged in the millions of dollars. Six persons were killed in weather-related accidents, four in Tennessee and two in Alabama.

The world

Communist rebels unleashed rocket attacks on the suburbs of Phnom Penh, capital of Cambodia, shortly before celebrations of the third anniversary of Prince Norodom Sihanouk's overthrow were to begin. The prince's mother and eight other members of the royal family were placed under arrest after Saturday's bombing attack on the presidential palace by his son-in-law. Despite the attacks thousands of Cambodians sang and danced in the streets.

Ten bombings, 25 shootings and a landmine explosion killed at least two persons in 24 hours in Belfast, giving blood-soaked Ireland its worst weekend in months. The explosion of a bomb-laden car outside a border pub killed a man in the car and slightly injured 25 persons attending a St. Patrick's Day celebration.

The dollar will be on its own today when European and Japanese money markets reopen and the "dirty float" worked out by 14 finance ministers takes effect, putting the value of the American currency at the mercy of supply and demand. Most ministers hope the market value of the dollar will be about the same as when it was at a fixed rate.

Federal officials also seek restrictions

Manufacturer urges curbs on drug

by KAREN BLECHA

A Mount Prospect drug manufacturer has joined with federal officials in urging stricter controls over the sale, distribution and prescription of methaqualone, a widely used sedative.

But officials of Arnar-Stone Laboratories Inc., one of the five United States companies making the drug, do not want controls as restrictive as those advocated by federal legislators. Legislators, the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) and the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs (BNDD) want to restrict the production of the drug and prohibit refillable prescriptions.

The sleep-inducing drug is prescribed for cases of insomnia but has also been used by persons without prescription. A large amount of the drug was stolen from Arnar-Stone, 601 E. Kensington Rd., two years ago and illegally sold to teens in the area and in Chicago.

DR. JOHN ZAROSLINSKI, vice president of Arnar-Stone's research department, said Friday the company is not concerned about the possibility of a quota restriction.

"But we are concerned about the patient who has legitimate use for the drug. We think to prohibit refillable prescriptions would place undue hardships on patients who need it for therapeutic use. I don't think anyone has spoken up for that person yet," he said.

Dr. Zaroslinski said Arnar-Stone has written to the FDA urging them to place methaqualone, currently not federally controlled, under the same controls as barbiturates. This would mean prescriptions for the drug could be refilled five times in six months. Manufacturers of the pill would also have to keep records of whom they sell the substance to.

Federal officials want the drug placed in the same class as cocaine, morphine, codeine, methadone, methamphetamine and amphetamine. Bills have been introduced in the U.S. House of Representatives and the Senate urging inclusion of methaqualone in this class, which would subject the drug to more rigid security.

If a bill is passed, the BNDD would be allowed to set production quotas, prohibit refillable prescriptions, prohibit exportation or importation without BNDD authority, and prohibit the sale or purchase of the drug from a manufacturer without a federal order form.

METHAQUALONE, sold by Arnar-Stone under the trade name Sopor, works as a depressant on the central nervous system and affects the center of the brain, which controls sleep.

According to BNDD, distribution of the drug has jumped 1,500 per cent in the past four years, from 8 million dosage units in 1968 to 147 million dosage units in 1972. "Abuse of the drug methaqualone in a 16-month period has resulted in 53 suicides and 313 overdoses," Robert J. Rosenthal, BNDD deputy chief counsel, said.

Roger Cain, executive director of the Illinois Pharmaceutical Association, said, "Methaqualone is in a category of drugs that are depressants. And any drug that is a depressant is a habit-forming drug — a physically addicting drug." He added that the addiction is reversible.

Although the drug has been promoted as a safe alternative to barbiturates, the BNDD said a study has shown such promotion "is totally inaccurate."

DR. ZAROSLINSKI said there are benefits to those who use the drug for legitimate therapy. "It has been used all over the world in various cases of insomnia," said Zaroslinski. He said Arnar-Stone has marketed the drug for several years. "It is a very useful drug; it does not produce side effects. It is particularly suited to the elderly."

Dr. Zaroslinski said overdoses of the drug, as with any drug, can cause death. An overdose of methaqualone is believed to have caused the recent death of David Whiting, business manager of actress Sarah Miles.

Methaqualone has been popular with teenagers because it is more readily available than are the federally controlled barbiturates, according to Dr. Zaroslinski. "This is why we have urged the government to try to stop the misuse of methaqualone," he said.

Zaroslinski said Arnar-Stone has tightened its security since a break-in earlier this year in which a small amount of Sopor was taken. Burglars also netted a small amount of the drug during a similar break-in last fall.

In April, 1971, 48,000 of the pills were stolen from the laboratories. Some of the pills were found in the possession of area teens and some were found in Chicago. The stolen drug had been distributed at a local dance, police said.

Firemen's funds to go for education

The $28,000 donated to funds established in memory of the three Palatine men killed in a fire last month will be used for the education of the victims' children.

The decision was tentatively reached at a meeting last week of a 15-member citizens committee set up to oversee the contributions.

P. T. diLustro, coordinator of the committee and executive vice president of the Palatine Chamber of Commerce and Industry Inc., said it was the wishes of the volunteer firemen's windows that the money be put in a trust fund for the children's education.

AN ADDITIONAL $2,500 donated to a fund set up by Palatine American Legion Post 690, is being given directly to the families.

Race track station ready by June

Construction on the new Chicago and North Western Ry. passenger station at Arlington Park Race Track is under way and should be completed by June 1.

There is a possibility, however, that use of the station will be postponed until after the close of the racing season, now set to end July 24.

An exact scheduling of trains and fares for commuters who will use the new depot still have to be arranged, according to Rollins Coakley, director of commuter service for the railroad.

But Coakley did say that the new depot will be "a full-service station" with rush hour scheduling comparable to that which now exists in downtown Arlington Heights and Palatine.

THE ARLINGTON PARK station stop is expected to become one of the biggest on the Chicago and North Western line. It is expected to draw commuters from Arlington Heights, Palatine, Rolling Meadows, Schaumburg, Buffalo Grove and Elk Grove Village.

The railroad is considering surveying riders to find out how many would switch to the new station, Coakley said. "But our big hope, of course, is to attract many new riders."

Village officials are hoping that the new depot will relieve, at least for a time, traffic and parking congestion around the downtown Arlington Heights station.

Some $414 will be turned over to the paramedic fund, at the request of the donors.

An additional $3,100 contributed by Inverness residents is expected to be given to the families.

Killed while fighting a fire which destroyed the Ben Franklin store in downtown Palatine Feb. 23 were Warren H. Ahlgrim, 357 W. Michigan Ave.; Richard H. Freeman, 22 S. Glenwood Ave.; and John T. Wilson, 250 E. Colfax St. Wilson was the owner of the store.

THEIR CHILDREN, who will share in the educational trust fund, are Pamela

Big pay hike asked for town officials

by JERRY THOMAS

The Schaumburg Township supervisor and clerk's proposed salaries for fiscal year 1973-74 took a 100 per cent jump as shown in a review of the township budget recently.

In contrast to last year's budget when the supervisor received $3,750 and the clerk $3,000, the new budget doubles the clerk's salary to $6,000 and allocates $7,000 for the supervisor's duties.

The tentative budget is posted in the township offices at the Buttery, 105 S. Roselle, Schaumburg, for review. However, only the road and bridge portion of the budget is voted on by township residents. A state law enacted in 1971 allows township officials to determine how to spend town funds.

The present slate of Republican township officials, except for Ralph Lyerla, collector, is seeking reelection.

Township officials will review and vote on the budget allocations at a meeting on March 27.

While big salary increases are proposed for some town officials, the assessor's salary will be increased $416 to $6,416, the highway commissioner from $4,000 to $5,000 and the weed commissioner remains at $600 annually. An appropriation of $3,840 is made for four auditors in contrast to the $1,580 budgeted for three auditors last year.

The new budget also designates $2,500 salary for a collector. Last year no salary was approved.

Most fixed office expenses were slightly increased. The funds provided for general assistance to needy families also have been increased about $10,000.

Decision on unit district plan consultant delayed

A decision on hiring a consultant for the Schaumburg Unit School District Feasibility Study Committee was delayed Friday until members of the group can discuss their plans with representatives of Schaumburg Township Elementary Dist. 54.

The meeting between representatives of the two groups is Wednesday.

The committee received three proposals Friday from consultants offering to complete the proposed feasibility study. The proposals came from Midwest Educational Consultants, Illinois School Consultants and Northern Illinois University.

After reviewing the three proposals, the committee agreed to delay accepting any of the proposals until after discussing the study with Dist. 54 officials.

The committee did agree, however, not to request funds from the school district.

It is possible for the school district to obtain a grant up to $3,500 from the Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction for such a study.

The bids submitted by the consultants were Midwest Educational Consultants, $5,000 plus expenses, Illinois School Consultants, $16,000 and Northern Illinois University, $5,500.

Richard A. Belnap, professor of education at NIU, submitted the proposal for the school's College of Education.

The committee also voted to add Lorraine Olsen, of 4 W. Weathersfield Way, Schaumburg, to fill a vacancy on the committee.

Mrs. Olsen has lived in Schaumburg for four years and has been active in the Lancer Park Homeowners Association. She is an insurance rater for the Aetna Insurance Co.

James Guidotti, who announced his withdrawal from the Dist. 54 board of education race, also was named to the committee.

Police unit president suspended

Patrolman William Spyrisson, president of the Des Plaines chapter of the Combined Counties Police Association (CCPA), was suspended for three days without pay last week on charges of insubordination.

The suspension came Thursday after Spyrisson refused to send a routine memo to Police Chief Arthur Hintz indicating that he had reported late for his 3 p.m. to midnight shift.

Spyrisson said he refused to send the memo because he had originally called in sick that day but later agreed to report when he was told there would be a shortage of patrolmen on duty.

Current contract negotiations between the city and CCPA will not be affected by the incident, said Spyrisson, a member of the CCPA bargaining team.

The matter had been turned over to the city's board of police and fire commissioners who will decide whether Spyrisson will be paid for the three days.

No hearing date has been set by the board.

Hoffman Estates firemen seek changes in district

Plans to seek a special election to alter the method of selection of trustees and general dissatisfaction with working conditions were voiced by union firefighters in Hoffman Estates Saturday.

Richard Cordova, president of Local 2061 of the International Association of Firefighters, AFL-CIO, said that union will begin March 26 to gather petitions requesting a special election in the Hoffman Estates Fire Protection District.

He said the election is aimed at allowing residents of Hoffman Estates Fire Protection District to select the trustees who run the district. Presently the three member board is appointed by the Cook County Board.

"We would like to make these men accountable to the people who pay the taxes on the district. Right now they are accountable to no one," he said.

CORDOVA ALSO said that the recent discussions on recognition of the local union have accomplished "exactly nothing." He said the board has continued to refuse to recognize the union, which was formed in mid-1971.

Cordova said a resolution will be presented by Trustee William Brilliant at the board's meeting Wednesday. He refused to discuss the details of the resolution.

Brilliant said Saturday that he did not wish to discuss the details of the negotiations with the firefighters at this time. He confirmed that he will present a resolution at the meeting. The other board members, Pres. Mark Dick and Charles E. Knapp could not be reached for comment.

Cordova said the union's primary complaint was over working conditions. He said that presently many of the district's 18 full-time firefighters were working schedules which allowed them little time to secure training or to be with their families.

The union, represents 15 of the 18 full-time men.

Cordova also said that the district has no in-service training schedule.

CORDOVA SAID that the union does not plan any type of strike or work slow down.

"We want the people to know about this situation, but we are sworn to protect lives and property and this is what we will do," he said.

Another firefighter, David Carlson, union secretary observed that since December the men have been working an increased number of hours, but the salary has been kept at the same rate.

It was also noted that the district has plans to construct a third fire station, but presently there are not enough men to man the facility.

Chicanos here forced to live in 'own world'

Tucked into the southern section of Schaumburg Township is a community unto itself. It speaks its own language, eats its own foods and lives apart from its neighbors.

Taylorville, it is called, by the few who know it is there. Most township residents have no occasion to enter its borders. But even those who do may not recognize what it is.

To reach Taylorville, turn west off Roselle Road on Pratt Avenue. Heading north from Pratt for a quarter mile takes you south of the border — you're in a Mexican town.

Houses are grubby with age. Walls of interlocking brick have unclenched their hold until airy loaches split their bond.

But don't compare Taylorville with Winston Knolls or Lancer Park. Weigh it against Mexican and Texan border towns, and find it good. Schools teach Taylorville's children 10 times faster here. Jobs may not pay much — but there are jobs. In Taylorville, crepe paper pinatas don't drip candy from tree branches to Mexican children below. But then they never did in Mexico either — not for Taylorville's child.

The eviction of a Chicago family from Hoffman Estates house shocked many residents of Schaumburg Township beyond belief this summer.

It shocked them not because the family was evicted, or even because they were Chicanos, but because of the official statements made concerning the conditions in which the family lived.

The buildings from which they were ejected contained 72 structural code violations. Police charged the owner with criminal mismanagement of property, terming the building unfit for human habitation, the situation "deplorable." Reports indicated members of the family lived in the house, a barn, a shed and an outhouse.

Miss Jean Christopher, administrator of the Northwest Opportunity Center, found the living conditions fairly normal for area Chicano families, and debated the information given in the official version of the incident.

She hotly denies any of the 26 persons in the family lived in the barn, the outhouse or the toolshed. And of the structures that were inhabited, she commented "It was neat. It was clean. There were an awful lot of rooms. I can't say it was really overcrowded."

A NATIVE suburbanite herself, Miss Christopher noted the situation was not on a par with what suburbanites require. But Chicanos do not compare their homes with other suburban dwellings. They look instead toward living conditions in Texas or Mexico, where most of them came from.

"In perspective, it wasn't as bad," said Miss Christopher, who also filled in the background of the evicted family.

The men all worked in the construction industry, until last year coming to the township in February or March and staying until November or December. A little over a year ago, when they left for the winter months, they agreed they would bring their parents, wives and children back the following spring, and make Schaumburg Township their permanent home.

Knowing they could not just drive in and find a home available, they reserved one, paying $800 to keep the building vacant for three months, guaranteeing it

Building used by Y destroyed by fire

Fire destroyed a one-story frame building on Wise Road in Schaumburg Friday which was used by the Twinbrook YMCA for day camp facilities.

The fire broke out early in the evening and caused about $5,000 damage to the building and its contents, according to Y director Bob Williams.

A spokesman for the Schaumburg Fire Department said the cause of the fire was undetermined. It is suspected that the blaze was deliberately set. No one was injured.

Williams said the building housed some YMCA equipment. It was also used as a warming shelter for skaters on the nearby pond which is also owned by the Y.

Williams said the building was built with volunteer help.

"I think we will be able to replace it, but it will take a lot of effort," Williams said.

Township officials will review and vote on the budget allocations at a meeting on March 27.

While big salary increases are proposed for some town officials, the assessor's salary will be increased $416 to $6,416, the highway commissioner from $4,000 to $5,000 and the weed commissioner remains at $600 annually. An appropriation of $3,940 is made for four auditors in contrast to the $1,560 budgeted for three auditors last year.

The new budget also designates $3,500 salary for a collector. Last year no salary was approved.

Most fixed office expenses were slightly increased. The funds provided for general assistance to needy families also have been increased about $10,000.

Communist rebels unleashed rocket attacks on the suburbs of Phnom Penh, capital of Cambodia, shortly before celebrations of the third anniversary of Prince Norodom Sihanouk's overthrow were to begin. Despite the attacks thousands of Cambodians sang and danced in the streets.

Commentary

Committee needs self-analysis

by JERRY THOMAS

Before attempting to sell itself as a township-wide group, the Schaumburg Unit School District Feasibility Study Committee would do well to take a look at its inner structure.

At a recent meeting, its members complained that the committee's intentions were misunderstood by township residents and wondered what measures to take to attain credibility.

The group's seven voting members, all Schaumburg residents, and the village mayor presided at the organizational meeting.

That happened because Schaumburg was concerned about the issue, and only Schaumburg residents volunteered to sit on the committee, the group said.

THAT'S A LITTLE hard to believe, since Schaumburg Township School Dist. 54, when it conducted a recent study, had no problem finding residents from throughout the township to sit on its committee.

The study committee is, according to its guidelines, conducting a township-wide study.

The actual committee is composed of only Schaumburg village residents, but representation comes from others also, said its chairman, William Jackson.

Jerry Thomas

They are advisers and do not have voting power he added. Palatine High School Dist. 211, Schaumburg Dist. 54 and a Schaumburg resident who seeks election to the Dist. 54 board round out the committee, the chairman added.

He is quick to point out the advisers really have nothing to do with committee decisions as they are non-voting members.

HOWEVER, the advisers helped decide what direction the group was to take and also what a professional study should emphasize as the group's objective.

They also sit in on interviews while the group is deciding who to hire to conduct the professional study.

Why not allow the advisers to vote? It might give a boost to the credibility campaign. It makes sense to allow school districts some vote on how a unit school district will be conducted.

The study group offers to appear before any group. There must be at least a hundred such groups in Schaumburg Township.

I'd urge everyone of them to invite the study group representative to talk and at the same time offer to serve on the study group.

You don't have to be a Schaumburg resident to apply for an opening on the committee. It will be interesting to see if it's a prerequisite for appointment.

the code violations came to light.

When they were evicted, they found other housing — scattered among friends and no longer a contained family unit.

Their situation was typical, said Miss Christopher. With low earning power, often $100 per week for families of 10 or more, housing is not easy to find.

"They are priced out of the market, forced to live in substandard, overcrowded conditions," said Miss Christopher, adding they often pay two or three week's earnings for each month's rent. Little is left for clothing, food and medical care.

Another family, living on Meadow Lane in Hoffman Estates, paid $275 a month rent with a weekly income of $86.50 to support five persons.

THE HUSBAND was studying to be a registered nurse, and worked at the hospital where he studied. But a family emergency interrupted rent payments, and he too was evicted. He took his family to Arlington Heights.

Miss Christopher feels villages do not want the Latin poor within their boundaries. She cites a situation in Elk Grove Village in 1969, when three children were killed in a fire in substandard housing.

All other families in the poor section of the village were evicted, and their homes were burned down, said Miss Christopher. The residents were offered one-way tickets to Texas, and eventually all left Elk Grove. She terms the action a "nice neat little way of getting rid of a housing problem," and suggests "Hoffman Estates has an effective means of eliminating its poverty problem, by eliminating the people."

IN SCHAUMBURG Township, estimates based on census poverty figures indicate about 225 Chicano residents. But Miss Christopher quarrels with the census totals.

"I think a lot of people probably weren't surveyed. I know there are quite a few more than the census shows, and the figures do not reflect illegal aliens," she said. Even native born Chicanos may not be counted because they often live in remote corners of unincorporated areas, she suggested.

Money isn't always the barrier to Chicanos finding a home. Miss Christopher tells of calling rental agents to inquire about apartments, being told they are available, and giving a Chicano name for the person who will stop by. She then is told the units already are rented, there has been some mistake. "Prejudice in housing comes to play quite a bit," said Miss Christopher.

Mrs. Edith Hovious, Schaumburg Township's social worker, agrees with Miss Christopher's assessment of the level of housing.

"Most housing is adequate to their needs. It would be inadequate for us. They'll sleep eight children in three bedrooms," she said. But to the Chicanos, the homes are good.

The Chicanos say people do not want to rent to them. Whether it is because they are Chicano, because there are so many children, or because they cannot afford to pay a great deal, they are uncertain. But they like the suburbs, away from Chicago and the drugs, crime and other problems a large city brings.

Municipal building furniture bids in

Bids were received from 12 firms to supply the Village of Schaumburg with furnishings and carpeting for the municipal building under construction southeast of the Schaumburg-Roselle roads intersection.

Bids were sought in five areas — furniture and accessories, custom fabricated furniture, auditorium seating, carpeting and window blinds. Some firms bid in all areas, while others bid only for one or two segments of the contract.

The board Tuesday night authorized granting the contract to low bidders, pending the recommendation of Village Mgr. John Coste and architectural consultants.

Apparent low bidders were: for furniture and accessories, Desks Inc., Chicago, $25,840.56; custom fabricated furniture, Endicott Furniture Co., $21,969; auditorium seating, Endicott Furniture Co., $5,231.35; carpeting, Contract Materials, Chicago, $9,420; and blinds, Desks Inc., $431.

ALSO APPROVED were contracts for purchase of a sign-making machine and two portable radios for use in village automobiles. Only one bid was received on each item. 3-M Traffic Control Products Division, St. Paul, Minn., received the sign-making machine contract for $2,167.76. Motorola Communications Division, Schaumburg, received the radio contract for $2,516.

The sign-making machine the village currently owns makes signs two inches smaller than required by the state's adoption of the international sign program.

In other action, the board approved granting a liquor license to Gullaby's, owned by the Some Other Place Pub chain, in the Churchill Square Shopping Center on Higgins Road.

Also granted was authority to the village fire prevention bureau to issue citations to persons or businesses violating the village's fire prevention code.

SUP plans greater resident government participation

Following the April municipal election, Schaumburg United Party (SUP) leaders will embark on a program designed to encourage resident participation in government.

Plans call for assigning each of the six village trustees three precincts in which to serve as liaison for SUP. Four trustee seats are open in the April 17 election, and while SUP has slated candidates for them, each is opposed.

Under the new system, each of the 18 precincts in Schaumburg will have one or more SUP area managers.

Area managers will be asked to report residents' problems or concerns to the trustee responsible for his precinct, according to Ray Kessell, deputy chairman of SUP and senior village trustee.

Stressing the reorganization is a party move rather than any alteration in village government, Kessell said trustee responsibility for assigned areas will be handled on a rotating basis to avoid over-identification. This method will also help familiarize all trustees with various problems in the village, as well as various portions of the community.

"We feel this move will result in more resident participation and increase community spirit in the village and its government," he said.

Kessell said SUP officials are hopeful by enlarging their circle of command, residents will be more willing to discuss problems or ideas with one trustee rather than approaching the full village board.

Drug manufacturer urges curbs on popular sedative

by KAREN BLECHA
A Mount Prospect drug manufacturer has joined with federal officials in urging stricter controls over the sale, distribution and prescription of methaqualone, a widely used sedative.

gerous Drugs (BNDD) want to restrict the production of the drug and prohibit refillable prescriptions.
The sleep-inducing drug is prescribed for cases of insomnia but has also been used by persons without prescription. A large amount of the drug was stolen from Arnar-Stone, 601 E. Kensington Rd., two years ago and illegally sold to teens in the area and in Chicago.

"But we are concerned about the patient who has legitimate use for the drug. We think to prohibit refillable prescriptions would place undue hardships on patients who need it for therapeutic use. I don't think anyone has spoken up for that person yet," he said.
Dr. Zarosinski said Arnar-Stone has written to the FDA urging them to place methaqualone, currently not federally controlled, under the same controls as barbiturates. This would mean prescriptions for the drug could be refilled five times in six months. Manufacturers of the pill would also have to keep records of whom they sell the substance to.

Federal officials want the drug placed in the same class as cocaine, morphine, codeine, methadone, methamphetamine and amphetamine. Bills have been introduced in the U.S. House of Representatives and the Senate urging inclusion of methaqualone in this class, which would subject the drug to more rigid security.

If a bill is passed, the BNDD would be allowed to set production quotas, prohibit refillable prescriptions, prohibit exportation or importation without BNDD authority, and prohibit the sale or purchase of the drug from a manufacturer without a federal order form.
METHAQUALONE, sold by Arnar-Stone under the trade name Sopor, works as a depressant on the central nervous system and affects the center of the brain, which controls sleep.

According to BNDD, distribution of the drug has jumped 1,500 per cent in the past four years, from 8 million dosage units in 1968 to 147 million dosage units in 1972. "Abuse of the drug methaqualone in a 16-month period has resulted in 53 suicides and 313 overdoses," Robert J. Rosenthal, BNDD deputy chief counsel, said.

Mount Prospect Dist. 57 will be in serious financial difficulty next year even if the Dist. 57 board only offers teachers a yearly increment in their 1973-74 contract, according to Richard Zwieback, professional negotiator for the board.
"A yearly increment plus raises for those who have earned extra education credits would cost the district approximately $54,000," Zwieback said yesterday. "Plus there's going to be an increase in health insurance and the district usually pays for that. The budget, as projected now, even with a 10 per cent average increase in state aid, shows that there will be a deficit of $100,000 to $110,000 next year (with the increment)," Zwieback said.

offer the teachers is "to clean up the schedule," said Zwieback. That is, the board would save money by eliminating those salary categories where teachers have earned educational credits beyond the bachelor's degree but have not yet been granted a master's degree. "If there was a way we could isolate the people on these lanes (categories), we would close the lanes out so the people couldn't get on them," Zwieback said.

Vondran had no comment on the board closing out these salary categories. "Without really going into how many people would be affected and what it would cost the district, I couldn't really respond," said Vondran.

"The board is going into debt. The question is just how far," he said.

Zwieback said the board responded to the teacher's contract proposals at their negotiations meeting Thursday night by indicating "those areas in which we might be able to work out something and those areas we just couldn't see doing anything with." Zwieback refused to comment on what these areas included.

DAN VONDRA, chief negotiator for the Mount Prospect Education Association (MPEA) said he had no response to Zwieback's proposals since his proposals were "not really concrete. There wasn't really a lot of response because there was nothing we could get our teeth into." Vondran said he asked Zwieback to put the board's counter-proposals in writing so the teachers could discuss it. Both sides decided to meet again on April 4.

Curtain goes up on 'reading for fun'

by MARY HOULIHAN

To walk through the second floor hall at St. Paul Lutheran School these days is almost like walking through the backstage area of an off-Broadway theater. Makeshift scenery, props and posters are strewn every few yards, poetry and paintings hang from bulletin boards on both walls and students scramble back and forth like they're getting ready for opening night.
Despite the apparent chaos, the activity on the second floor of the Mount Prospect school has a very serious goal — to encourage children to read. Not because they have to — because they want to. The name of the program is "Reading for Fun."

THE BRAINCHILD of three St. Paul's teachers, Lorraine Anderson, Bill Strahle and Tim Hebel, Reading for Fun motivates a child by utilizing his own interests in what he chooses to read. "The children are encouraged to read from a variety of materials, textbooks, paperbacks, library books or books from home," said St. Paul Prin. Ron Brandt. Students must okay the book with one of the teachers before they start reading to be sure the book isn't beyond their reading level.

After a student reads a story, he or she "acts out" what was read by choosing one of several methods — presenting a play, radio or TV program, writing a poem or a story, creating something in clay or painting a picture. No matter what is done, "we must have evidence of the plot of the story," said Mrs. Anderson. "But they can embellish it any way they want."
"Right now, poetry is the thing," said Mrs. Anderson. From the looks of things on the second floor, plays probably run a close second in student popularity. "Usually this hallway is pretty loaded with scenery and kids coming back and forth," Mrs. Anderson said.
BECAUSE THE plays call for more oral expression, they've also helped to give some students more poise. "One thing we found is that the shy person, the first time they got up, hardly said a word. Now they've just come out of their shells and I have to cut them off before they go overtime," Mrs. Anderson said.

According to Brandt, an interest in reading projects at this age level is unusual. "Usually, this is the time where children lose interest," he said. "I don't know if anybody's figured out why. Whether it's physical and emotional changes or whether we're just making it too dry, I don't know."
Whatever the reading for fun program does for students, it seems to be working. "I can see the growth," said Mrs. Anderson. "The creative energies of the children have increased tremendously. And you see an improvement in other lessons too, because the children have to write out their scripts and with art work, there have been bounties of improvement."

Minton asks referendum on housing

During his walking campaign throughout the village, Michael Minton is telling Mount Prospect residents that a referendum should be held before any low-income housing is permitted in the village.
The mayoral candidate is basing his statements on a Supreme Court ruling that he says allows "the use of public referendum in each and every suburb to determine if that suburb desires low-income housing." He says further that the ruling states "that if the people of Mount Prospect vote against it, the low-income housing cannot be placed in Mount Prospect."

In his press release, Minton did not state which Supreme Court he was referring to.

"It is the mayor's responsibility," he continued, "to protect the property values of his constituency and to encourage only those housing developments that will serve in their best interests. As low-income housing now exists, it will only serve to depress property values and place undue financial stress on the homeowner."

"I RECOGNIZE that any man can and should be able to purchase a home where he can afford and has a desire to live, but he must be able to maintain a standard of living equal to the area in which he chooses to live. I firmly believe in this concept, and as mayor, I will defend anyone's right to purchase a home under this concept. However, with low-income housing a series of units are built, be it homes, apartments or low-rises; they are incorporated into middle or upper-middle income neighborhoods, to be leased or sold to low-income families, whether they are on welfare or are minimum-wage earners."

"This has never been proven to be successful by the government. It has only depressed the area in which they are built."

"As mayor I would not concede the right to gamble with the property values of the people living in our Village of Mount Prospect. We cannot take property away from a person without due process of law. When we depress a neighborhood by depressing its standards and force its residents to live in an unacceptable area, we are violating their rights and taking away property from them without due process of law."

Minton, who is running against incumbent Robert D. Telchert, closed by saying, "As mayor, I will never make a move that will jeopardize the livelihood or property values of any resident of Mount Prospect."

The third candidate in the race is Albert J. Motsch.

The administration wants the authorization extended for another year although Phase III depends largely on voluntary guidelines.
Militant Indians occupying Wounded Knee, S.D. booted a new government proposal asking them to lay down their arms and submit peacefully to arrest. There has been no formal response by American Indian Movement leaders to the proposal. Many have vowed to die rather than surrender.

A stick of dynamite exploded near a Denver, Colo. police substation and a Molotov cocktail hit a community relations storefront a day after battles between police and snipers left one man dead and 19 injured. Mexican-American leaders in Denver say police used excessive action in breaking into apartments and making wholesale arrests.
Twenty-five school children had to be evacuated from a northern Indiana farmhouse where they had been stranded since Saturday when their school bus became bogged down in deep snow while returning from a field trip. Three National Guard helicopters were sent in and other copters were used to reach motorists stranded in drifts across the northeast section of the state.
Thousands of residents in Tennessee,

Alabama and Mississippi were left homeless by torrential rains that spawned the worst flooding in the region in nearly half a century. Damage estimates ranged in the millions of dollars. Six persons were killed in weather-related accidents, four in Tennessee and two in Alabama.

The world

Communist rebels unleashed rocket attacks on the suburbs of Phnom Penh, capital of Cambodia, shortly before celebrations of the third anniversary of Prince Norodom Sihanouk's overthrow were to begin. The prince's mother and eight other members of the royal family were placed under arrest after Saturday's bombing attack on the presidential palace by his son-in-law. Despite the attacks thousands of Cambodians sang and danced in the streets.
Ten bombings, 25 shootings and a landmine explosion killed at least two persons in 24 hours in Belfast, giving blood-soaked Ireland its worst weekend in months. The explosion of a bomb-laden car outside a border pub killed a man in the car and slightly injured 25 persons attending a St. Patrick's Day celebration.

The dollar will be on its own today when European and Japanese money-markets reopen and the "dirty float" worked out by 14 finance ministers takes effect, putting the value of the American currency at the mercy of supply and demand. Most ministers hope the market value of the dollar will be about the same as when it was at a fixed rate.

The presentation is one of a number of cultural arts programs sponsored by the Euclid School PTA.

Election of PTA officers for the 1973-74 school year will be during the business portion of the meeting. The Dist. 57 school board candidates will also attend to present their views on the upcoming school election.

Coffee will be served. All parents are invited to attend.

Plywood firm zoning hearing canceled

There was no rezoning hearing Friday for the Plywood Minnesota Inc. site, 1031 E. Algonquin Rd. The hearing was canceled when it was learned that the property, scheduled for annexation, was not contiguous with Mount Prospect's boundaries.

When the approximately four-acre parcel was surveyed, it was discovered that contiguity was missed by a few feet, Mayor Robert D. Teichert said Friday. "It is not of great concern to us," he said.

The property was to be annexed because the owner, Otto Semrow, wanted annexation and because the village owns an acre of the site. This acre was donated to the village by Semrow and a well was drilled there last year. A water storage tank and well house are also being built there.

Teichert admitted the error was somewhat embarrassing but he added it could easily be made if one went on the impression looking at a map gives.

The property will probably be included in another annexation at some future date, Teichert said.

40-acre annex suit continued again

A hearing on a lawsuit filed two years ago by a Prospect Heights group charging Wheeling illegally annexed 40 acres of undeveloped land has been continued again.

The hearing, scheduled for today, has been continued until 10 a.m. March 29 because Circuit Court Judge Robert Downing is out of town. Downing is the third judge to hear the suit, which has been continued more than 10 times since filed in March, 1971.

The suit charges that Wheeling illegally annexed 40 acres of land near Wheeling Road, north of Camp McDonald

Road, because the land is not contiguous to the village. In November, 1971, a judge ruled that the land was not contiguous.

BUT THE CHARGE is being heard again because Downing is new to the case. Assistant State's Atty. Paul Biebel, who is now handling the case for the group known as the Wheeling Road Zoning Committee, said he expects Judge Downing to also rule that the annexation was illegal.

Once the contiguity question is settled, the judge will have to rule on the charge by Wheeling that the Prospect Heights group waited too long after the annexation to file the suit. The suit was filed 44 days after the annexation of the land, owned by Arnold Lieblich. The statutory limit for filing a suit is one year.

Lieblich has been allowed to intervene in the suit on the side of Wheeling. He wants to build a multi-family development on the land, which was rezoned for the development by Wheeling officials when it was annexed in February, 1971. The site is just east of Wheeling Road and south of St. Alphonsus Catholic School.

Explorer Scout unit a thriving outfit

With 14 members, the Mount Prospect Law Enforcement Explorer Scout unit is now a functioning organization.

Detective Richard Yost, group adviser, said the group is meeting every other Thursday at the Village Hall, 112 E. Northwest Hwy. "We are still open to membership, but we don't want the group to get too large," he said. Ten boys and four girls, ages 15 to 20, belong so far.

The group is currently electing officers and undertaking preliminary discussions on what they hope to accomplish. Sponsored by the police department, Explorer Post No. 323 enables members to explore career potentials in the law enforcement field. Members will meet with, observe and get counsel from qualified persons in the legal profession and law enforcement.

Much of what the group will do will be left up to the members, according to Yost. Possibilities he mentioned are tours, part-time jobs to produce revenue (like car washes) and camping trips.

A list of proposed program topics includes: municipal court procedure, military law, police operations, municipal government, trials, defensive driving, airport security, bicycle safety, narcotics and other aspects of law.

$200 stolen from car

Some $200 was stolen Friday from an unlocked car belonging to George Poulos, which was parked at his home, 2013 Hopi Ln., Mount Prospect. Police said a neighbor saw a man in his early 30s, about 5 feet 10 inches tall, flee from the car at the time of the theft.

Park View population discussion tonight

Parents at Park View School, River Trails Dist. 28, will meet at 7:30 tonight in the school, 805 N. Burning Bush Ln., Mount Prospect, to discuss the student population and possible transfer of the sixth grade to the River Trails Junior High School next year.

The parents group is seeking suggestions and recommendations from the community. All interested parents are invited to attend.

$200 home fire

A fire caused some $200 damage Friday to the basement at the home of Robert Zeller, 1201 Greenwood Ave., Mount Prospect. The cause of the fire was undetermined.

School board weighs new test tonight

A new test (mandated by the state of Illinois) that will be used in Mount Prospect Dist. 57 to identify learning disabilities in 3 and 4-year-olds will be one of the topics of discussion at the Dist. 57 meeting tonight. The meeting, beginning at 8 p.m., will be at the Lincoln Junior High School, 700 W. Lincoln St., Mount Prospect.

Also on the agenda for the meeting is a report from the superintendent selection committee and a report from Supt. Richard Percy.

Police unit president suspended

Patrolman William Spyrisson, president of the Des Plaines chapter of the Combined Counties Police Association (CCPA), was suspended for three days without pay last week on charges of insubordination.

The suspension came Thursday after Spyrisson refused to send a routine memo to Police Chief Arthur Hintz indicating that he had reported late for his 3 p.m. to midnight shift.

Spyrisson said he refused to send the memo because he had originally called in sick that day but later agreed to report when he was told there would be a shortage of patrolmen on duty.

Current contract negotiations between the city and CCPA will not be affected by the incident, said Spyrisson, a member of the CCPA bargaining team.

The matter had been turned over to the city's board of police and fire commissioners who will decide whether Spyrisson will be paid for the three days. No hearing date has been set by the board.

Bicycle auction set Saturday by police

About 75 bicycles will be sold Saturday during the annual Mount Prospect Police Department auction.

The auction will begin at 9 a.m. in the Public Works Building, 11 S. Pine St. As in the past, all proceeds will go to the Police Pension Fund.

Persons who have lost a bike or had one stolen in recent months may go to the public works building between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. any weekday to see if they can find the bike. Proof of ownership must accompany any claims on a bike. Also, prospective bidders may look over the bikes to be offered.

From the library

With spring almost here, high school juniors and seniors will again be taking off on weekends for their favorite colleges, to check them for possible future attendance.

The Mount Prospect public library has a large selection of reference books available on specific colleges, as well as catalogues from a great number of the schools themselves, and there are books on colleges in the regular circulating non-fiction section.

One of these is "Choosing a College." This book contains 37 leading questions a student could be asked in an interview, and tells what admission boards look for in an applicant's autobiography. The author cites actual examples of application from his files.

"The real facts about 168 colleges" is what the book "College Confidential" claims to give you. Naturally, these capsules are slanted with the author's personal opinions, but not so much that you can't get a good start on college selecting — especially if you're in the beginning stages of choosing. The schools are listed alphabetically and by category. SAT scores required, size, sex ratio, cost, and their pervading atmospheres are discussed.

Certainly the public library is no place to choose a college, but it's a start. In fact, the library's Young Adult section can help the graduate who isn't going to college, as well as the college-bound. Here's where readers can find books and pamphlets on careers. Choosing a career after high school is really a more difficult choice than choosing a college, because it's more final. The library is open weekdays 9 a.m.-9 p.m., Saturday 9 a.m.-5 p.m., and Sundays, 2-5 p.m.

drugs that are depressants. And any drug that is a depressant is a habit-forming drug — a physically addicting drug." He added that the addiction is reversible.

Although the drug has been promoted as a safe alternative to barbiturates, the BNDD said a study has shown such promotion "is totally inaccurate."

DR. ZAROSLINSKI said there are benefits to those who use the drug for legitimate therapy. "It has been used all over the world in various cases of insomnia," said Zarosinski. He said Arnar-Stone has marketed the drug for several years. "It is a very useful drug; it does not produce side effects. It is particularly suited to the elderly."

Dr. Zarosinski said overdoses of the drug, as with any drug, can cause death. An overdose of methaqualone is believed to have caused the recent death of David Whiting, business manager of actress Sarah Miles.

Methaqualone has been popular with teenagers because it is more readily available than are the federally controlled barbiturates, according to Dr. Zarosinski. "This is why we have urged the government to try to stop the misuse of methaqualone," he said.

Zarosinski said Arnar-Stone has tightened its security since a break-in earlier this year in which a small amount of Sopor was taken. Burglars also netted a small amount of the drug during a similar break-in last fall.

In April, 1971, 48,000 of the pills were stolen from the laboratories. Some of the pills were found in the possession of area teens and some were found in Chicago. The stolen drug had been distributed at a local dance, police said.

Disposal company criticizes village

Bids would have cost us $16,000 loss, Laseke insists

Henry Laseke, president of the Laseke Disposal Co. in Arlington Heights, has submitted an eight-page explanation on why he did not bid on continuing garbage collection in the village.

In his written remarks, Laseke calls for a five, rather than the proposed four-year contract, and says the proposed system of refunds for service missed because of holidays would result in a $16,000 loss over four years.

Laseke's current four-year contract with the village expires next January. The company has collected garbage in Arlington Heights for more than 20 years.

The report criticizes a number of options in the village specifications and says the company will not make a firm bid until the type of service has been decided.

THE SPECIFICATIONS sought bids on either backdoor or curb pickup. Two bids were received, both for curbside service in disposable bags. Bids of $3.30 and $3.50 for once-a-week pickup were submitted as well as a bid of $4.50 for twice-a-week service.

Arlington Heights residents currently pay $4.82 per month for backdoor pick up twice weekly.

He also criticizes a proposal that would make the residential scavenger just one of several contractors licensed to provide commercial service in the village.

"We can't bid on this basis because cost would vary according to frequency of stops," the report states.

The company has been relying on its commercial accounts to make up for losses in residential service which last year amounted to $194,943 or $1.12 per family per month, according to the report.

LASEKE ALSO contends that the contract should provide for an automatic rate increase to cover 75 per cent of any increase in cost sustained by the contractor, and the right to renegotiate for the remaining 25 per cent.

Village specifications provide only for the right to renegotiate in the event of a cost increase.

Members of the village board finance committee criticized the company for not bidding on the current specifications. They will take until April 10 to consider Laseke's comments and the two bids that were submitted.

Money will be used for attorney fee

Group gives $1,000 to fired teacher

The Arlington Teachers Association (ATA) has voted to donate $1,000 to pay attorney fees for John Fender, president of the ATA, who was fired last June.

Fender, who taught language arts at Miner Junior High School, was fired by the school board for "cruelty in relations with students." He is currently appealing the case, in which a decision is expected Wednesday.

The $1,000 donation brings the total ATA contribution for Fender's legal fees to $2,200. The regional office of the Illinois Education Association (IEA) has also helped pay Fender's legal fees with $1,800. The IEA is expected to contribute more in the near future.

"We're trying to help out as much as we can. The money has been collected from our dues," said James Modoc, vice president of the ATA. "As of now our help has only been a drop in the bucket towards Fender's attorney fees, though."

The ATA welfare fund, used for unusual temporary expenses of teachers, now includes $2,000, most of which was earned during a recent tea and raffle.

IN OTHER ATA business, the annual contract talks are scheduled to begin March 22, according to Modoc. At the present time an attorney for the teachers is reviewing the contract. "We should have a package ready by Thursday," Modoc said.

According to a ruling by the ATA representative assembly, which includes a teacher from each of the Dist. 25 schools, "the negotiating team shall not accept any package which breaks, removes or lowers the (salary) index."

Since the negotiations are not open to the public, no other contract information is available. This year, the entire two-year contract is up for negotiation.

"EN GARDE" soon will be the cry of fourth through eighth graders at Hasbrook Park where fencing lessons will begin next week. Patty Pinski, a sophomore at Arlington High School, demonstrates the technique taught by Mary Ann Welpton, who also will teach the park district classes. Registration for the classes, which last six weeks, is $6 and should be made at Hasbrook Park, 333 W. Maude.

Corrado's sewer lines on agenda tonight

The Arlington Heights Village Board tonight will take up the question of whether to disconnect Corrado's restaurant from a village sewer because of delays encountered in annexing the Rand Road property.

The Plan Commission voted 7-4 to recommend that the sewer be disconnected after numerous hearings, dating to September, 1971, failed to bring about the promised annexation of the property.

Man arrested in check cashing case

A 54-year-old Chicago man was arrested by Arlington Heights police Friday after attempting to cash checks at a local food store with an alleged false check-cashing card.

Weldon Burris, 1348 E. 75th St., was apprehended after a clerk at the Jewel Food Store on Golf and Arlington Heights roads reported the incident.

He has been charged with possession of

Preschool plans OK'd by commission

Plans for a new day-nursery school and possibly a Hebrew school have been presented to the Arlington Heights Plan Commission. The nursery school, known as the Pre-Educational Center (PEC), is being proposed as part of a 6.5-acre commercial development along Rand Road immediately north of Stonebridge apartments.

According to Tibor Schwarcz of Skokie, who operates two other P.E.C. schools in Skokie and Des Plaines, he nursery school would enroll about 60 children, aged 2½ to 5 years, in half-day sessions.

Schwarcz said he is also considering opening a Hebrew school at a later date, if the proposed development is approved, but says the two schools would be completely separate.

"The nursery school would be completely non-denominational. P.E.C. is strictly an educational center interested in giving the child a preparatory education. It is not a play school," Schwarcz said.

The establishment of a Hebrew school will depend on whether there is enough interest on the part of Jewish parents, he said. P.E.C. currently operates a nursery school in Des Plaines.

The plan commission had a number of questions about the proposed development, including the layout of the commercial buildings, parking and plans to include a Ponderosa restaurant.

The matter was continued to July 18.

A FIRE EARLY Saturday morning caused an estimated $90,000 to the River-Willow Garden Apartments, 916 Old Willow Rd., in unincorporated Wheeling Township. The fire was discovered by residents of an adjoining building, and they were credited with getting people out of the burning building alive. See story on page 4.

This Morning In Brief

The nation

Critics of President Nixon's Phase III economic policies plan to offer tough anti-inflation amendments when the wage-price control bill comes before the Senate today. The Economic Stabilization Act, which gave the President authority to issue Phase I and Phase II wage and price controls, expires April 30. The administration wants the authorization extended for another year although Phase III depends largely on voluntary guidelines.

Militant Indians occupying Wounded Knee, S.D., booted a new government proposal asking them to lay down their arms and submit peacefully to arrest. There has been no formal response by American Indian Movement leaders to the proposal. Many have vowed to die rather than surrender.

A stick of dynamite exploded near a Denver, Colo. police substation and a Molotov cocktail hit a community relations storefront a day after battles between police and snipers left one man dead and 19 injured. Mexican-American leaders in Denver say police used excessive action in breaking into apartments and making wholesale arrests.

Twenty-five school children had to be evacuated from a northern Indiana farmhouse where they had been stranded since Saturday when their school bus became bogged down in deep snow while returning from a field trip. Three National Guard helicopters were sent in and other copters were used to reach motorists stranded in drifts across the northeast section of the state.

Thousands of residents in Tennessee,

Alabama and Mississippi were left homeless by torrential rains that spawned the worst flooding in the region in nearly half a century. Damage estimates ranged in the millions of dollars. Six persons were killed in weather-related accidents, four in Tennessee and two in Alabama.

The world

Communist rebels unleashed rocket attacks on the suburbs of Phnom Penh, capital of Cambodia, shortly before celebrations of the third anniversary of Prince Norodom Sihanouk's overthrow were to begin. The prince's mother and eight other members of the royal family were bombed under arrest after Saturday's bombing attack on the presidential palace by his son-in-law. Despite the attacks thousands of Cambodians sang and danced in the streets.

Ten bombings, 25 shootings and a landmine explosion killed at least two persons in 24 hours in Belfast, giving blood-soaked Ireland its worst weekend in months. The explosion of a bomb-laden car outside a border pub killed a man in the car and slightly injured 25 persons attending a St. Patrick's Day celebration.

The dollar will be on its own today when European and Japanese money-markets reopen and the "dirty float" worked out by 14 finance ministers takes effect, putting the value of the American currency at the mercy of supply and demand. Most ministers hope the market value of the dollar will be about the same as when it was at a fixed rate.

Federal officials also seek restrictions

Manufacturer urges curbs on drug

by KAREN BLECHA

A Mount Prospect drug manufacturer has joined with federal officials in urging stricter controls over the sale, distribution and prescription of methaqualone, a widely used sedative.

But officials of Arnar-Stone Laboratories Inc., one of the five United States companies making the drug, do not want controls as restrictive as those advocated by federal legislators. Legislators, the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) and the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs (BNDD) want to restrict the production of the drug and prohibit refillable prescriptions.

The sleep-inducing drug is prescribed for cases of insomnia but has also been used by persons without prescription. A large amount of the drug was stolen from Arnar-Stone, 601 E. Kensington Rd. two years ago and illegally sold to teens in the area and in Chicago.

DR. JOHN ZAROSLINSKI, vice president of Arnar-Stone's research department, said Friday the company is not concerned about the possibility of a quota restriction.

"But we are concerned about the patient who has legitimate use for the drug. We think to prohibit refillable prescriptions would place undue hardships on patients who need it for therapeutic use. I don't think anyone has spoken up for that person yet," he said.

Dr. Zaroslinski said Arnar-Stone has written to the FDA urging them to place methaqualone, currently not federally controlled, under the same controls as barbiturates. This would mean prescriptions for the drug could be refilled five times in six months. Manufacturers of the pill would also have to keep records of whom they sell the substance to.

Federal officials want the drug placed in the same class as cocaine, morphine,

Firemen's funds to go for education

The $28,000 donated to funds established in memory of the three Palatine men killed in a fire last month will be used for the education of the victims' children.

The decision was tentatively reached at a meeting last week of a 15-member citizens committee set up to oversee the contributions.

P. T. diLustro, coordinator of the committee and executive vice president of the Palatine Chamber of Commerce and Industry Inc., said it was the wishes of the volunteer firemen's widows that the money be put in a trust fund for the children's education.

AN ADDITIONAL $2,500 donated to a fund set up by Palatine American Legion Post 690, is being given directly to the families.

Some $414 will be turned over to the paramedic fund, at the request of the donors.

An additional $3,100 contributed by Inverness residents is expected to be given to the families.

Killed while fighting a fire which destroyed the Ben Franklin store in downtown Palatine Feb. 23 were Warren H. Ahlgrim, 357 W. Michigan Ave.; Richard H. Freeman, 22 S. Glenwood Ave.; and John T. Wilson, 250 E. Colfax St. Wilson was the owner of the store.

THEIR CHILDREN, who will share in the educational trust fund, are Pamela Ahlgrim, 14, and David Ahlgrim, 8; Christopher Freeman, 4, and Tracey Freeman, 16 months; and Stephen Wilson, 13, Deborah Wilson, 11, and Linda Wilson, 8.

Contributions are still being accepted to the Volunteer Firemen's Memorial Fund at the Palatine National Bank, 50 N. Brockway St.; Suburban National Bank, 800 E. Northwest Hwy.; First Bank and Trust Co., 35 N. Brockway St.; and Palatine Savings and Loan Assn.; 100 W. Palatine Rd., all in Palatine; and at the Bank of Rolling Meadows, 3250 Kirchoff Rd.

The American Legion's fund, known as the Palatine Firemen's Memorial Fund, is accepting contributions at the Palatine Savings and Loan Association.

Inverness residents can donate money to the memorial fund, care of village clerk Sandra Johnson, 1850 Tweed Rd.

IN ADDITION, 7-Eleven Food Stores in Arlington Heights, Barrington, Hoffman Estates, Palatine and Rolling Meadows are making available envelopes which can be used to send contributions to the Palatine Volunteer Firemen's Memorial Fund at the Bank of Rolling Meadows.

On the citizens committee overseeing the funds, in addition to diLustro, are Berton G. Braun, village manager; Fred H. Zajonc, village trustee; Orville Helms, fire chief; Jerome W. Pinderski, of the chamber of commerce; pastors Cal Robinson and James W. Errant Jr.; B. D. Shepherd of Shepherd Publications; Forrest S. Elleman, Inverness village president; Janet Schwettman, of Inverness; Roger Ahlgrim, of Ahlgrim and Sons Funeral Home; Harry Benstin, of Harry Benstin and Associates Insurance Agency; John Lynch, of the Palatine National Bank; and Paul Belton of American Legion Post 690. Also on the committee but unable to attend last Thursday's meeting is W. W. Heise, of the First Bank and Trust Co.

The committee is to meet again this Thursday to finalize arrangements for the educational trust funds.

Mrs. Edfors arraigned for daughters' murders

by TONI GINETTI

Shouldered by two court bailiffs as she sat weeping before the bench, Mrs. Elaine Edfors was arraigned Friday on two counts of murder in connection with the bludgeoning deaths of her two daughters three weeks ago.

Associate Judge Anthony J. Scottillo ordered Mrs. Edfors held without bond until a grand jury decides April 24 whether to formally indict her for the murders. A behavior clinic exam for her was also ordered by the judge, with results to be submitted to the grand jury.

The petite, dark-haired woman was found unconscious by her husband Thomas Feb. 28 in their home at 3600 Jay Ln., Rolling Meadows. She was lying near the body of her 9-year-old daughter Debbie and her near-dead 8-year-old daughter Pamela. Pamela died the following day in Evanston Hospital.

Wearing a black leather coat, white skirt and yellow scarf about her neck, the 34-year-old Mrs. Edfors was escorted into the 2nd Circuit Court district courtroom by two women bailiffs. Her hands were manacled behind her back. Her 37-year-old husband sat across the room.

DURING EXAMINATION by the prosecuting attorney, Rolling Meadows Police Sgt. Tim Lonergan told the court he found Mrs. Edfors lying unconscious on her stomach "covered with blood" when he entered the Edfors home the night of the killings. Lonergan said a bloodsoaked straight razor was lying under Mrs. Edfors' right shoulder.

Lonergan, who was the first policeman on the scene, testified he found Debbie lying on her back in a west bedroom of the home. "Her head appeared to be caved in and it appeared to me she was dead," Lonergan said.

As Lonergan spoke, Mrs. Edfors broke into sobs and bailiffs grabbed her as she collapsed into a chair. Her husband, who was standing several feet away, turned his head and walked toward a window.

Lonergan then described finding the badly injured Pamela and a hammer police believe was used in the slayings.

In cross-examination, Lonergan testified that he knew Edfors, told the court the only time he had met Mrs. Edfors was on Dec. 7 when he assisted in bringing her to Lutheran General Hospital at her husband's request.

Mrs. Edfors was a patient at the hospital for one week in December.

IN TESTIMONY he gave the court, Edfors said he returned home from work the night of Feb. 28 but could not enter through the front door. He said the door had been blocked by an object inside. Edfors, who spoke softly and appeared to avoid eye contact with his wife, said he called the police when he found his family lying in the home.

A third Edfors youngster, Timmy, 6, was playing at a neighbor's home when the incident occurred, police have said.

During the proceedings Friday, the prosecution entered as evidence 22 photos of the interior of the home taken after the incident as well as the hammer and razor found in the home.

Police have indicated they have letters related to the case but have declined to reveal their contents. Rolling Meadows Police Chief Lewis R. Case said the letters may be made public at a coroner's inquest into the girls' death, which had yet to be scheduled.

Homeowners worry about project

Homeowners in Arlington Terrace have voiced concern about plans to develop a 40-acre site immediately south of their subdivision.

At a recent meeting with four of the six candidates who will be elected to the village board April 3 without opposition, residents said they feared the property would be planned for multi-family housing.

A plan commission hearing on the property has been scheduled for June 20, but details of the plan have not been released. The land is directly east of John Hersey High School and now lies in unincorporated Cook County.

Other matters brought to the candidates' attention included the trend toward multi-family throughout the village and the flooding problems of some residents.

Trustee Alice Harms and candidates Jack Walsh, Graeme George and David Griffin attended the meeting.

Adventures of your Garbageman

After seeing our recent ad, a customer asks: "How come garbage contracts are awarded for such long periods — 5 years up to 20 years?"

The reason for a long contract is the heavy cost of equipment. Servicing Arlington Heights, for example, requires about $750,000 worth of trucks and commercial containers — plus, of course, a garage and mechanical facilities.

Most of this equipment takes more than 5 years to depreciate for Federal income tax purposes (even though by then it may have little or no resale value). So, even a 5-year contract is a gamble for the contractor, because if it isn't renewed for a second period, he is stuck with equipment of comparatively little value which hasn't even "paid for itself" yet.

That's why most garbage contracts are written on a 10-year basis. About those 20-year contracts, we wouldn't know. We should be so lucky!
